New Coast-to-Coast Record.
Hitler and Achilles.
All Is Motion.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

COL. ROSCOE TURNER again beats the ocean-to-ocean flying record, this time by thirteen and a half minutes. Trains make the journey in four days and three nights.

Turner made it in less than eleven hours. That must make intelligent railroad men think hard.

THE PULLMAN COMPANY has news to comfort advanced railroad men that would like to escape from "horse and buggy, and Civil War railroading," as William B. Stout, of Dearborn, Mich., aptly calls modern railroading.

This column has been howling and yelling, during sixteen years, for stream-lined, light passenger coaches, capable of high speed, to replace the present slow coaches that carry twenty passengers and weigh one hundred and sixty thousand pounds.

A new Pullman coach, built by Mr. Stout, presumably for W. A. Harriman's Union Pacific, will carry fifty passengers and weigh only twenty-five thousand pounds, thanks to light duralumin construction.

Its stream-lining reduces air resistance by fifty per cent, and it will go ninety miles per hour.

Wind resistance in an ordinary coach at that speed would use up ninety per cent of the engine's energy. Such light cars, driven by Diesel engines, could carry passengers from coast to coast at twenty dollars each, make a good profit and end automobile bus competition.

IN THE midst of our NRA program, we may suddenly find something exciting going on.

Johan Mowinckel, prime minister of Norway, warns the League of Nations that war danger exists, and it does.

The situation between France and Germany is dangerous, and Russian newspapers, that speak for their government, or not at all, openly threaten Japan.

GEN. GOERING, Germany's fighting aviation minister, talks peacefully to Jules Sauerwein, editor of the Paris-Soir. Says he:

"We don't want war. I say this to you, and I am a soldier whose business it was for years to make war."

But, he adds:

"We are entirely surrounded by nations that are friends or allies of France. Would anyone pretend that we are in a position to defend ourselves from air attack?"

HE DEMANDS an adequate air fleet, and Germany will build it, unless a Communistic revolution, feared by Lloyd George, should prevent. Professional soldiers, denouncing war, sometimes deceive themselves.

Achilles, "fleet of foot," said, with all sincerity, to his mother, the sea-nymph, Thetis:

"May strife perish utterly among gods and men, and wrath that stirreth even a wise man to be vexed."

But ten lines farther on, as you read in the eighteenth book of the Iliad, he has changed his mind, thus:

"But now let me win high renown, let me set some Trojan woman, some deep-bosomed daughter of Dardanos, staunching with both hands the tears upon her tender cheeks and wailing bitterly."

A number of fiery gentlemen in Europe and Asia would like to "win high renown" and war is the short cut to that end.

THE CALIFORNIA Institute of Technology announces that man has "actually seen the miracle of creation of matter."

The terrific speed of "fast-flying radium rays is converted into electrical particles." In other words, "matter can be created from pure motion," since all matter consists of atoms, which are nothing but "electrical particles" charged positively and negatively, the kind of matter depending on the number and arrangement of these electrical particles within the atom.

IN OTHER words, all reality, everything that we call "the material universe" is simply motion.

Long ago Sir Humphrey Davy by rubbing together two pieces of ice at 29 degrees Fahrenheit, obtained water at 35 degrees Fahrenheit. And nearly a hundred years ago, Robert Mayer, a German physician, proved that water could be heated by shaking it.

ANOTHER GROUP of scientists say they can create the plasm, or whatever it is in which life originates. Possibly they can, although it seems improbable, even in these marvelous days when every chemist knows that re-arrangement of the atoms might change any base metal into pure gold.

Thus far, no scientist has suggested that he could create THOUGHT. That, after all, is the only thing of importance in this corner of the universe. Without it nobody could investigate or discuss the atom.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT suggests that the price of steel rails be cut to promote buying and give employment. Steel men will oblige, if possible, although raising wages, reducing hours and working days, and reducing prices, at the same time, presents a problem.

The late Judge Gary, head of "big steel," thought he did well when he abolished the twelve-hour day. In the language of the stage, "he hadn't seen nothin' yet."

THE WORST news of the day comes from Manchuria where brigandage, war and hunger are complicated by an outbreak of

MINE STRIKERS IN MARCH THROUGH CLAIRTON

Brother Fights Slot Machine Heiress for Cash

NEW BATTLE FOR ESTATE OF M'KNIGHT

Slot Machine Heiress Faces $21,000 Suit By Her Brother

Comely Madeline McKnight, the Soho slot machine heiress, today found another fight on her hands to collect the modest fortune left by her father.

Madeline's brother, Felix P. (Chunie) McKnight, stepped into the picture and announced that he'd like to have $21,000 out of the estate of their father, the late Paddy McKnight, Soho political boss.

Felix and another brother were ignored in their father's will, but Felix contended today that his father owed him $21,000—some of it for loans, the rest representing money which Felix argues belongs to him. This was the nature of his claim on file in Common Pleas Court today. The action was aimed at Attorney Howard Neely as executor of the estate.

Felix complains that Neely has refused to pay his claims.

Paddy McKnight's estate, valued at from $125,000 to $200,000, was inherited entirly by his only daughter, Madeline, 20, a former student at Mt. Mercy Academy. Since her father's death she has left their Soho home and moved to an apartment in Bellefield.

In April she herself went into court to battle over the will. She asked for the removal of Attorney Neely as executor, complaining, for one thing, that he had failed to find the slot machines which she said her father owned. She declared, too, that Neely was counsel for Senator James J. Coyne's Oakland Real Estate Company, which she said owed the estate $27,000. She withdrew the action.

MINE 'ARMY' INVADES CLAIRTON

Strikers in Parade Before Mill Workers

Five hundred striking miners of Fayette County staged two demonstrations before workers of the Carnegie Steel Company in Clairton today as a small army of heavily armed officers stood guard.

With American flags and banners flying from their trucks and automobiles the miners "on holiday" because the H. C. Frick Coke Company refuses to sign the NRA coal code, paraded through the principal streets.

Once they called to an armed cordon of uniformed company police at the entrance to the huge by-product plants:

"Join the union, men."

PINCHOT WIRE

The Governor told Hughes:

"If the Carnegie Steel Company is threatened by striking miners, it has nothing but the blind and brutal conduct of affiliated officials to thank for it. The moment these officials cease to let their wilful and antiquated prejudices against organized labor stand in the way of national recovery and sign the coal code the trouble will be over.

'DESPERADO' SURRENDERS MEEKLY

Urschel Kidnap Figure Drops Own Gun as He Faces Another

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—George E. (Machine Gun) Kelly, notorious desperado, surrendered without a struggle here today when a detective sergeant pointed a sawed-off shotgun at his heart.

The southwest's "bad man" was asleep in a bungalow this morning when Department of Justice agents quietly perfected plans for his capture to face trial in connection with the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil man.

The house in which he and his wife, Kathryn, and two others, J. R. Tichnor, 30, and S. E. Travis, 26, were staying, was surrounded by officers.

Officer Bill Raney entered a front door. As Kelly opened a bedroom door, revolver in hand, Raney told him quietly:

"Drop that gun, Kelly."

WIFE WAIVES 'REP TAPE'

At the police station to which the four were taken, Kathryn Kelly immediately agreed to waive extradition and return to Oklahoma City to face trial. Kelly was not as communicative as his wife, and not nearly as agreeable to returning to Oklahoma City.

"I'm not talking about anything."

His auburn-haired wife said:

"I was going back to Oklahoma City tomorrow and give myself up. Kelly told me he would kill me if I did, but I was going anyway."

She said she wanted to save her

5,000 INJURED, DEAD IN GALE

International News Service.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Sept. 26.—A raging flood today added to the growing death toll of the hurricane which swept Tampico early Sunday. Fifteen feet deep it swirled through the streets of the devastated Mexican city, according to radio reports received here from Pan-American Airways fliers who are dropping relief supplies. Estimates placed the number of dead or injured at more than 5,000.

Bodies were being carried on the crest of the flood. Huge drifts of debris battered the windshattered ruins. Airplanes thus far have been unable to land anywhere near Tampico. Flood waters cover every available landing space.

Pilots swooping low over the city, however, are getting a good

Mellon 'Dead as Hector' In New Deal—Pinchot

Century of Progress Speech Attack on 'Money Kings'

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—Downfall of the money kings and a new birth of freedom for the American people were predicted by Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania today at the Pennsylvania Day celebration at A Century of Progress Exposition.

Tribute for this and for our "changing from an unlimited monarchy to a really Democratic government" was showered upon President Roosevelt by Pennsylvania's independent Republican Governor. He referred to the President as "the man who spoke about the forgotten man before election, and remembered him afterward."

Gov. Pinchot assailed the "Mellon and the Morgan dynasties" and referred to the late Boise Penrose, United States Senator from the Keystone state, as "an errand boy for the Pennsylvania steel barons."

Turning to Andrew W. Mellon, who was "the only man in American history to have three Presidents serve under him," the Governor observed:

"The New Deal put an end to his political career. Nationally he is as dead as Hector.

"Mellon and the Mellon dynasty are on the toboggan. But they are not there alone. We shall not go far wrong if we say the same thing of Morgan and the Morgan dynasty, and the other big fellows who think and act as if they had title in fee simple to the United States and all that is therein."

CUPID TACKLES TECH COACH

Don Lovewell, new assistant football coach at Carnegie Tech, insisted today that he was not a bridegroom, but the record apparently contradicted him.

The records show that in Beaver Falls last night one Don Lovewell, of the Fairfax Hotel, Pittsburgh (that's where the coach lives), and one Ada Householder, of Toledo, O. (that's the coach's home town), were married by Miss W. C. Behnaman, clerk of courts, in Miss Behnaman's home. Both gave their ages as 26.

Miss Behnaman today would not deny that she had married the couple, but she insisted the newlyweds be consulted.

In the marriage license Lovewell gave his occupation as stationary engineer—which might, of course, mean a line coach.

COYNE PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Sixteen defendants, including State Senator James J. Coyne and Pat O'Malley, entered pleas of not guilty today to charges of conspiracy to violate election laws, growing out of the grand jury inquiry into congressional elections in the Thirtieth and Thirty-second districts in 1932.

Arraignment of the 107 defendants indicated in the alleged conspiracy had been set for October 2. Those who have entered pleas were permitted to sign them in advance at their own choice.

Others who signed the pleas were Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, member of the State Legislature; B. Robert Averbach, counsel for the Regular Republican organization; Louis J. Conley, deputy fire chief and Republican chairman in the Ninth Ward; Wallace Ray, delinquent tax clerk; Thomas Saunders and Frank Miller, Stowe Township policemen; Joseph W. Muldowney, Mary Wagner, Ruth F. McCartney, Albert Levine, William Kennedy, Al Sherin, Earl McDermott and A. E. Calhoon, all members of election boards in the Fourth Ward.

WALL ST. WINS TAX BATTLE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Wall street will remain in the center of the financial world.

Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, today accepted the compromise by which the exchange will transact its business in this city if Mayor O'Brien vetoes the stock transfer and brokerage taxes.

In a letter to the Mayor, Whitney wrote that he would recommend dropping of the plan to open a trading floor in Newark as soon as the Mayor vetoed the two levies.

At City Hall, it was reported the Mayor would kill the two bills this afternoon.

A substitute program of taxation was believed to be in process of formation to make up for the two measures which are expected to be killed, and it was in this new schedule that the higher fare—a two-cent tax on subway rides—was said to be under consideration.

Lamson Goes To Gallows Dec. 15

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—David A. Lamson, Stanford University publishing house executive convicted of wife murder, was sentenced today to hang at San Quentin Prison December 15.

The sentence was pronounced after a motion for a new trial had been denied and Lamson had stood before Superior Judge R. R. Syer and said:

"I know that under the law and the verdict you can do nothing but impose the death sentence. But my conscience is clear. Before you and before God I am as innocent as you are yourself."

Defense attorneys immediately filed notice of appeal.

Ring Lardner, Humor Gone, Dies 'Broke' After Battling Illness 10 Years

Noted as Humorist, Playwright and Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Ring Lardner, who once noted that there wasn't much difference between his native Niles, Mich., and his adopted New York, because both begin with an "N," has lost his long fight against tuberculosis.

The lean, six-foot humorist, who became a ranking figure of American literature, died suddenly at his East Hampton, Long Island, home last night in the forty-eighth year of an active, interesting life.

They say that Lardner, who earned a fortune with his writing, died virtually broke, because of poor business ventures and his inability to say "no" to a hard luck story.

For 10 years Ringgold Wilmer Lardner had fought the disease. During those years, with the specter drawing steadily closer, his humor flowed on, bringing laughs to the faces of those who saw on the stage "Elmer the Great" and then "June Moon," and to other tens of thousands who read his "Story of a Wonder Man," "Love Nest" and other stories.

Heart disease, complicated by other ailments, was given by his doctors as the immediate cause of death.

Was Small Town Boy Who Made Good In Big City

Only in the last few years has the Lardner typewriter gone on short hours. His doctors ordered him to the Southwest, and he remained there many months. When he returned to New York several months ago he was reported much better.

His days of quantity production, however, were over. He did a col-

Honeymoon Fight Story, Wins Co-Ed Divorce

A Pitt campus romance that culminated in a Wellsburg (W. Va.) marriage a little more than a year ago, was ended today.

Ruby Louise Bush, 21, of 207 Delafield road, Aspinwall, testified her husband, Henry J. (Rogers) Bush, 25, called her a "jinx" and wanted her to go home alone, while they were on the honeymoon. Bush's home was given as 317 Semple street, Judge W. Heber Dithrich granted a divorce.

They were married June 9, 1932, and by the time they returned to school in the fall they had been separated. Her father H. L. Crispen, filed the divorce action last October. In that short time, Mrs. Bush testified, her husband had left her to walk a mile and a half over a country road after attending a swimming party at Reynoldsville had scratched and choked her, and had threatened to throw her out of the window of her home in Aspinwall.

She said while on their honeymoon, in an auto, they became lost near New Haven, Conn., and he blamed her. When she got out of the car to read the sign posts, she said, he drove off, returning three-quarters of an hour later.

She said her husband never introduced her as his wife and threatened her if she mentioned they were married. When they returned to school a year ago she said her husband took her purse and umbrella, and later when asking for a reconciliation drove her to Highland Park and choked her.

BULKLEY BACKS INFLATION AFTER ROOSEVELT PARLEY

SENATOR SEES CUT IN GOLD CONTENT

Expressing His Own Views, Asserts Ohioan

WASHINGTON Sept. 26.—(AP.)—After a conference with President Roosevelt on the money question today, Senator Bulkley (Dem.), of Ohio, expressed the view that inflation through the issuance of Treasury notes "within modest limits won't do any harm."

Bulkley, a member of the Senate Banking Committee, declined to communicate to newspapermen President Roosevelt's views on the currency problem, but praised the course the Chief Executive is following.

He predicted the time would come for lowering the gold content of the dollar, but said it hadn't arrived yet.

Emphasizing he was expressing his own views, he said:

"Ultimately we will come to fixing the gold content substantially lower than the old gold content, but I am not prepared to predict how much it will be."

SUPPORTS PRESIDENT

The Senator told reporters as he left the White House that he had discussed money, inflation and stabilization with the President and was "very much in favor of the course he is pursuing."

Discussing stabilization, Bulkley praised the President for "watching his chance to do it right."

The Ohio Democrat said he was not predicting the issuance of Treasury notes under the Thomas inflation amendment, adding it "may or may not be done." He continued:

"If we do find it necessary to issue Treasury notes to meet maturing obligations within modest limits it will be all right."

Bulkley said in such a case the Treasury notes, instead of bearing interest, would be retired through a sinking fund.

Senator Shipstead, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite, also discussed the money question with the President briefly, but would not comment on his talk.

Shipstead said he also had urged upon the President speeding up efforts to relieve the farm mortgage situation and early construction of the St. Lawrence waterway.

...lt Departs On Hyde Park Trip

The President departed by special train for New York City, where he will spend the night at a family reunion, departing tomorrow for a week at his Hyde Park home.

Ways to expand credit and lift farm prices topped the chores scheduled for even more intensive study by Mr. Roosevelt after three crowded weeks spent canvassing every phase of the federal push toward economic betterment.

Newest developments in an intensive credit expansion program was a promise given the President by steel executives to submit competitive bids on a 700,000 tonnage order for steel rails. Mr. Roosevelt planned to advance the $25,000,000 or more needed by the carriers to buy the rails—provided the prices are low enough.

Arriving in New York, which is torn with political turmoil, Mr. Roosevelt has banned any engagements during his stop. He has declared hands off in the raging mayoralty campaign.

The President was accompanied northward by two secretaries, Marvin H. McIntyre and Stephen T. Early. He will remain until early next week, stopping in New York on October 4 to speak before the Conference of Catholic Charities.

GERMANY ASKS ARMS CUT STAY

International News Service.

GENEVA, Sept. 26.—Fighting for German arms equality, Foreign Minister Baron von Neurath of the Reich today demanded delay of at least six months before the world powers adopt the proposed disarmament convention.

The demand, softened by diplomatic circumspection, was made by the Reich representative in the course of a conversation with Norman R. Davis, American expert; Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon, of Britain, and Baron Pompeo Aloisi, of Italy.

Davis and Sir John, it was reported, demurred at the suggestion, insisting that a disarmament agreement be reached before the snow flies.

Official circles here interpreted Von Neurath's demand as a hint that Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Third Reich has not yet had time to regain for Germany her "rightful" place in Europe, and that this should be done before the nations agree on a disarmament scheme.

It was learned, meanwhile, that Premier Mussolini's four-power pact, actually, though unofficially, is functioning in the disarmament talks, with the Italian Premier being represented by Delegate Suvich.

EASTMAN SEES STEEL SPURT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Joseph B. Eastman, transportation co-ordinator, told newspapermen today the 700,000 tons of steel rails which manufacturers have promised President Roosevelt they would bid on to help the administration's credit expansion-employment plans is the minimum required by the railroads.

If the prices are low enough, Mr. Roosevelt told steel executives yesterday, the government would advance the carriers $25,000,000 or more to buy the rails.

Eastman, who is gathering the figures on which the administration is acting, said the normal rail needs of the railroads was 2,000,000 tons a year when conditions were such that new construction could be undertaken.

He declined to reveal any plans as to interest rates or how the manufacturers would submit their bids. From other sources, however, it was learned the bids probably would be submitted on units of 50,000 to 100,000 tons, the price scaling downward as the size of the total order increases.

Denies Jailer Role In Luer Kidnaping

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mike Musiala, one of six persons on trial for kidnaping August Luer, Alton (Ill.), banker, today testified he knew a prisoner was being kept in a cellar on his farm, but never saw the victim.

Somewhat evasive in his answers under cross-examination, the steel worker held fast to his story that Randol Eugene Norvell, professional bondsman and gambler, also a defendant, talked of using the cellar as a liquor cache, but gave him no advance notice of their intention to use it as a prison.

FEAR OF KELLY TOLD AT TRIAL

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—An unreasoning fear of George (Machine Gun) Kelly and Albert Bates prevented R. G. Shannon from notifying officers while Charles F. Urschel was held captive at his Paradise, Tex., farm in July, the farmer testified as he resumed the witness stand for cross examination in the kidnaping trial today. He said:

"I knew the boys (Kelly and Bates) had radios on their cars and that if I told off on them they would come back and I would not be alive, my boy, Armon, would not be alive and maybe Mr. Urschel would not be alive today."

Joseph B. Keenan, assistant United States attorney general, took up the examination where it was halted by recess after nearly a day of questioning yesterday.

DAVIS' REPORT TO MOOSE READ AT TRIAL

Proceedings at Meet Cited as Evidence Against Senator

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—United States Senator James J. Davis' report to the Loyal Order of Moose as director general in 1930 was offered as evidence against him in Federal Court today to show that he was cognizant of the conduct of Moose charity balls.

The government charges that the 1931 charity balls of the Moose constituted a lottery and Davis and Theodore G. Miller are on trial charged with violation of the federal lottery laws. Miller is head of the Moose propagation department, a fund-raising office.

Davis' report, delivered in convention on June 30, 1930, said gratifying results were obtained from charity balls of 1929 and that even more gratifying results were to be expected from the next enterprise of the kind.

JURY WARNED

Judge Johnson Hayes warned the jury not to be concerned about any alleged lottery of 1930, since Davis and Miller are charged with an offense in 1931. He also explained that the mere holding of a lottery was no federal offense.

Louis Mead Treadwell, assistant United States attorney, got into the records another report of Davis' delivered at the 1931 Moose convention at Atlantic City, in which he said:

"Despite the demands upon my time as secretary of labor and later as United States Senator, I have at every time, kept in contact with every detail of Moose work."

The government's object was to forestall the defense presented at Davis' first abortive trial in which it was contended that he was too busy with governmental affairs to know what was going on in the Moose.

SECRETARY TESTIFIES

Over the objection of Treadwell the defense drew from Giles voluminous details about Davis' connection with various Moose funds.

Charles H. Tuttle, of defense counsel, emphasized Moose philanthropies and he went over with Giles the machinery of the organization department to show that it had many employes to share its profits.

parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Shannon, who are now on trial in connection with the kidnaping.

Early this morning police received a telegram from the Department of Justice that the Kellys were hiding in Memphis, his black hair dyed yellow, and his wife wearing a red wig.

FLEW TO MEMPHIS

The agents, headed by W. A. Roper, flew into Memphis by plane and were met at the airport by local police.

Together, they went to the house on Rayner street, and surrounded it.

Kelly, police said, was traced here by a telegram sent in code to Tichnor. The message's contents were not revealed, but it presumably was a tip to Tichnor concerning movement of officers.

Tichnor, police said, is not wanted in connection with any of the crimes charged to Kelly, including participation in the slaying of Policeman Miles Cunningham, who attempted to capture five men who robbed a Federal Reserve Bank automobile in Chicago recently and fled behind an exhaust pipe smoke screen.

Police Chief Lee said there was $10,000 reward for Kelly in connection with the Urschel kidnaping and a $5,000 reward in connection with the bank job. Who is entitled to the rewards has not been determined.

SIX AID ARREST

The actual arrest of Kelly and the other three was made by Sergt. Raney, Detective Sergt. Floyd Wiebenga, A. O. Clark, a patrolman; Roper, B. F. Fitzsimmons and R. E. Peterson, the last three agents of the Department of Justice.

A short while after the capture was effected, planes bringing Department of Justice operatives from St. Louis and Chicago arrived in the city.

The arrest of Kelly and his wife came two days after their third wedding anniversary. Mrs. Kelly, interviewed in a city jail cell, said:

"And what a swell anniversary. I had a hunch we would be taken here."

She said she didn't want to "have anything more to do with Kelly," and that "he got me into this terrible mess."

Chief Lee was taking no chances with his prisoners. The cells in which they were placed were surrounded by officers with machine guns and sawed-off shotguns.

SAYS HE'LL ESCAPE

Kelly said:

"Tell the world I will be out of this jail before long.

"They got me, but keeping me is another matter."

No ransom money was found on Kelly.

Asked why he came to Memphis and if he expected to hide here, Kelly smiled and said:

"Well, you see it was a case of any old port in a storm. An island would have done. I had no intention of staying in Memphis, just happened through here on the way somewhere else—had a little business to attend to here."

Pointing to the armed guards about his cell, he remarked:

Kelly Betrayed by Tip Of Wife's 'Mystery' Friend

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—It was an Oklahoma woman from whom the government learned that George Kelly was in Memphis, Melvin H. Purvis, of the investigation unit of the Department of Justice here, said today.

The woman is a Miss Arnold, Purvis said, a close friend of Mrs. Kelly, who had left her Oklahoma home with the Kellys and accompanied them to Memphis after the Urschel kidnaping.

After visiting with them several days, she returned to the Southeast, and the government, hearing that she knew where Kelly was, gave her a thorough siege of questioning. At length, Purvis said, she talked, and the federal agents found Kelly.

Capture of Kelly 'Wonderful,' Says Urschel

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Charles F. Urschel, millionaire oil man, who was kidnaped by George (Machine Gun) Kelly and Albert L. Bates from his home in Oklahoma City on the night of July 22 last and held for $200,000 ransom, told International News Service today that he was "elated" over the capture of Kelly and his wife, Kathryn, in Memphis, Tenn. He said:

"That's wonderful news."

Asked if he would help prosecute the Kellys, he smiled and said:

"I'll be ready to aid the government if they need me."

Kelly recently sent Urschel a death threat from Chicago, calling him "Ignorant Charlie" and warning him against assisting the government.

United States Attorney Herbert K. Hyde, who is prosecuting the Urschel defendants, said he did not believe the Kellys would be brought to Oklahoma City until the Urschel trial is over. But, he added, the Kellys would be prosecuted as soon as possible.

Dead at Home

RING LARDNER

Mr. Lardner, the newspaper humorist, dead today in his New York home. He was only 48.

umn on radio in the weekly New Yorker—a humorous, critical column that carried a sting for those artists, those sponsors and those stations which he felt were not serving the public need for entertainment. The sweep of the humor that filled "You Know Me, Al," "Gullible's Travels," "Own Your Own Home" and the hilarious, "How To Write Short Stories" was gone. Occasionally it flashed on those last published writings, but the spontaneity and wit of "Treat 'Em Rough," "The Young Immigrunts" and "Symptoms of Being 35" were not there.

BORN IN MICHIGAN

Lardner was born in Niles, Mich., March 6, 1885. As he put it, he was born during "Have-a-Baby" week. In comparing Niles and New York later he said there was little advantage either way, as the New York Central tracks ran through both places.

Throughout many of Lardner's writings the home-town pride is noted. His youth was spent there and his first job on a newspaper was in South Bend, Ind., just 10 miles away.

His journalistic experience was devoted almost entirely to the sports page—South Bend, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, and back to Chicago. He travelled with the baseball clubs, the White Sox and the Cubs, in the days of "Doc" White, Mordecei (Three-Fingered) Brown, Frank Chance, Tinker, Evers, and the many others of Chicago's heyday of baseball. He became a recognized authority on the game, loving it for its sport and for the humanness of its players.

BIRTH OF 'JACK KEEFE'

From this experience he drew the material for the development of his best known character, the egotistical, bumptious, lovable and dumb bushleaguer, Jack Keefe, who told of his experiences in the big league by means of letters to "Al."

Lardner leaves his widow, the former Ellis Abbott, of Goshen, Ind.; four sons—John, James, Ring W., Jr., and David; two sisters—Mrs Richard Tobin, of New York, and Miss Lena Lardner, and three brothers—Rex, of Great Neck; Henry, of Niles, Mich., and William, of Duluth. Of the sons, John is a New York newspaperman. The others are attending school.

3 STATE LIQUOR CONTROL PLANS TO BE OFFERED

Special Assembly Session Possible In November

By WILLIAM J. KELLY
International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 26.—Three separate and distinct plans for control of liquor in Pennsylvania are definitely in the making for submission to the General Assembly.

Authoritative sources today revealed this to International News Service. Behind each plan is tangible, though not completely organized support. A substantial measure of sympathy, however, was found to exist in all three cases.

THREE PLANS

Out of the welter of embryo proposals to govern the flow of liquor, three emerge most prominently. They are:

1—A modified Quebec system with the commonwealth as the actual dispensers.

2—A revival of the Brooks high license law or some similar system empowering the courts to issue licenses.

3—The creation of a state licensing board.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot is not only ready to call a special session, possibly for November 13, but he is personally concerned about liquor regulation. So also are leaders of the Republican and the Democratic organizations. For several weeks they have been attempting to feel out the sentiment of constituents.

The Governor insists he has an "open mind" on the question, though repeatedly he has scorned any plan that would bring liquor problems back into the courts. It is known that for weeks he has been looking into the Canadian systems and looks with favor upon legislation closely aligned to the Quebec plan.

Under this, individual liquor dealers would be outlawed and dispensaries would be established by the Commonwealth in all sections of the state. This would not only keep the courts free from liquor, but also would make the state the sole authority on sale and taxation.

OPPOSED HERE

Opposed to this plan are groups centered chiefly in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Scranton and a few third-class cities, who see merit in a revival of the Brooks high-license law or a kindred method whereby the judges would issue licenses. Because of the large urban representation in the General Assembly and the influence of lawyers who benefited while that law was in existence, the proposal of this group appears certain to have substantial support.

The third voice, calling for a state licensing board, comes from central and upstate counties where the population density is not as great and the sentiment is none too wet.

The licensing board plan would permit individual dispensers. The Commonwealth would take no part in the sale of whisky and wine as would be the case under a modified Quebec plan.

In addition, revenue, one of the principal motivating forces behind repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, would be derived from the sale of licenses. While the method of distributing this money perhaps would be varied, local municipalities would stand a chance of benefiting financially. Under the beer law, revenues derived from licenses go to municipalities while that from taxation goes to the state.

Russian Opera-Goers Cheer Lindberghs

International News Service.

MOSCOW, Sept. 26.—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh began a round of activities today following their arrival from Leningrad by plane.

Appearing fresh and smiling in the coffee shop of the National Hotel shortly after 8 a. m., they ate a continental breakfast of coffee and brioche.

After breakfast Mrs. Lindbergh wandered through the art galleries whiel her husband conferred with aviation chiefs. He also planned to inspect Soviet Russia's greatest airplane factory.

During the afternoon, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh plan to visit the Kremlin and will probably attend a theatrical performance this evening.

Last night they witnessed a performance of the opera "Eugene Onegin."

"Hurrah for Lindbergh."

Cuban Rebel's Army Drives Him 'Crazy'

By KARL DECKER
Universal Service.

HAVANA, Sept. 26.—Juan Blas Hernandez, Cuba's eternal insurgent, walked into the presidential palace here yesterday, embraced President Grau San Martin, and announced that he was "through" for the time being.

His two student sons who accompanied him to Havana, and their father, "biggest rebel of the Cuban interior," are at liberty and wandering all around the place.

"Capt." Hernandez explained to Universal Service his reasons for laying down the job of perennial rebel. He said:

"My army drove me crazy!

"I started with 200 men. We took the town of Moron.

"Then I arranged with a friend owning an establishment nearby to feed my 200 men and me.

"We killed three cows—lean and scrawny things they were, too.

"Before they were over the fire, I found myself with an army of 500 men. Two days later I had an army of 800.

"They were all hungry. I couldn't feed them. I couldn't maneuver them. So I came to Havana to escape them!"

At the presidential palace a statement was given out that Juan Blas and his hungry gang had never been in revolt.

Capt. Sanchez, of the army, on reading the statement, turned to this correspondent and remarked in wonderment:

"My gosh! Then why did I send 700 men to chase him?"

SMART AUDIENCE SEES O'NEILL TURN CLOWN HERE

STAGE SEASON OPENS WITH GREAT ADO

Playwright Absent, But George Cohan Puts It Over

Read George Seibel's review of "Ah, Wilderness!" on Theater Page.

George Cohan, Eugene O'Neill and what is known as a smart audience opened Pittsburgh's theatrical season last night with a great to-do.

Serious O'Neill contributed his surprise by presenting, instead of nine or more acts of laughless studies of human beings, or a series of masked interludes — a comedy!

O'NEILL ABSENT

As for O'Neill, he was conspicuous by his absence, for opening nights are "poison" to him.

That is why the "strong man of American drama" was in New York today leaving his first comedy to fend for itself.

To the cast he sent this telegram:

"Sorry, deeply sorry I am not with you, but there is a certain peculiar oil in opening nights that invariably poisons me. Even at this distance I already feel in a very delicate condition. Good luck to all of you."

WIFE SENDS MESSAGE

O'Neill has not been known to attend an opening night of any of his last five plays. His wife also shied clear of the premiere, but sent this message:

"You have all been such dears. You are so splendid collectively and individually that I know you will have the success you desire. Will be thinking of you every moment. God bless you all."

It was signed Carlotta Monterey O'Neill.

SOCIETY TURNS OUT

The audience was, as is customary at Guild openings, "society." In fact, many of the theatergoers hurried to the Nixon direct from a society wedding—that of Mary Franklin Robinson and William D. George, Jr., at Sewickley Heights.

The play itself concerned small-town life and the advice of a smalltown publisher (Cohan) to a poetic, adolescent lad. The critics received the piece warmly.

BANK CASHIER ELUDES POLICE DRAGNET

Miss Hazel Weigel apparently has made good her escape.

Throughout this and neighboring states today police were still looking for her, but the assistant cashier of the State Bank of Elizabeth, and $7,300 remained unaccounted for.

It was last Friday that Miss Weigel, 43, went away, so to speak. And the chances were that she'd be located in 24 hours. But she hasn't been.

VANISHES IN CAR

She walked calmly out of the bank, dropped into her coupe and drove away. She wasn't even wearing a hat and she didn't visit her home for any extra clothes. She was seen an hour or so later driving through McKeesport. And that's the latest report.

But before she departed she went to the Elizabeth postoffice, signed for $3,000 of the bank's funds—and apparently took that with her. The remaining $4,300 missing from the bank she had taken in various sums since 1930, according to B. E. Wylie, president of the bank. Wylie has filed a charge of embezzlement against her.

WITH BANK 17 YEARS

Miss Weigel lived alone in Pangburn Hollow, near Elizabeth, since the death of her mother a few years ago. She has numerous relatives in Western Pennsylvania, but the police, after checking the relatives, announced that she hasn't sought refuge with them.

Noted for her generosity, Miss Weigel had been with the bank for 17 years. She disappeared during an audit of the bank's accounts. The loss is covered by bond, bank officials say.

LIFE INSURANCE HEAD ON TRIAL

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Twelve men, who told defense counsel they had suffered little as a result of the depression, were chosen as the jury which will hear the trial of Ernest J. Stevens on a charge of embezzling $1,200,000 from the Illinois Life Insurance Company.

Only 48 men were questioned before the defense found 12 who could say they had not lost money in the 1929 stock crash, the Insull debacle nor in Chicago bank failures. The defense contended only such jurors could be relied upon to hear and judge their case with an "open mind."

Ernest Stevens is one of three members of the financially and socially prominent family originally made defendants on charges that they wrecked the insurance company.

The three Stevenses, James W., 80, the father, and his sons, Raymond and Ernest, are alleged to have loaned the concern's funds to their hotel companies when the latter were not solvent. Raymond committed suicide. The father is an invalid.

GILMAN BEAUTY CHARGES MATE WITH ABUSE

Milkman Must Pay Wife Whose Sister Divorced W. E. Corey

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A woman, once a belle of Broadway, appeared in Family Court yesterday, charging her milkman husband with abuse and non-support.

She was Pearl Gilman, sister of Mabelle Gilman, famous beauty of the "Floradora Sextette," whose marriage to William E. Corey, steel millionaire, was the sensation of the town a couple of decades ago.

GOT $7,000,000

Pearl, now the wife of Owen Murray, the milkman, expects to inherit half of her sister's estate if she outlives her.

Mabelle divorced Corey some years ago, with a reported settlement of $7,000,000.

Jerome A. Jacobs, attorney for Mrs. Murray, described her plight to Magistrate Luis Brodsky and said:

"It's just one of those strange happenings of little old New York. One sister married the greatest steel man in the country; the other, Eunice, married a wealthy Connecticut inventor; this one married a milkman, who mistreated her. That's life."

ORDER TO PAY

Despite Murray's plea that Pearl ordered him out and refused to mother his 10-year-old son by another marriage, Magistrate Brodsky ordered him to pay $15 a week toward the support of his wife and held him in bond.

After court Pearl revealed that a rift has developed between herself and her wealthy sister, now living in England on the income of her trust fund, after the Spanish royal family refused to sanction her proposed marriage to Prince Luis Ferdinand de Bourbon.

Pearl was married to her milkman in February. Of the marriage she said:

"It was the possibility of my outliving Mabelle that gave Owen the idea to make love to me in the first place."

COREY ONCE MINER

Mabelle Gilman's first husband, William Ellis Corey, began his career as a miner in Braddock. Encouraged by Andrew Carnegie, by 1903 he was president of the United States Steel Corporation after serving as superintendent of the Homestead steel works and president of Carnegie Steel Company. After he divorced his first wife to marry the pretty actress, the directors of the Steel Corporation suggested he resign. He did.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 26.—Patricia "Boots" Mallory, former Broadway dancer and now a featured film actress, and William "Bill" Cagney, actor brother of James Cagney, screen star, were married Sunday in a romantic elopement to Agua Caliente, Miss Mallory revealed today.

And, said Miss Mallory, all doubts about the strange marital tangle involving her and Charles R. Bennett, actor-musician, were dissolved in a rose-colored cloud of romance, for, as she put it:

"I got an annulment of my marriage with Mr. Bennett in New York. And that's that."

Bennett last March 7 filed a petition in Superior Court here asking that the marital status of himself and Miss Mallory be settled. Later it was marked off the court calendar.

HOLDUP NEAR WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Two bandits last night blackjacked and robbed Maurice J. Morrison of $4,000 in a holdup a block from the White House in which a shot was fired.

One of the two escaped with the money. Police arrested a man who gave his name as James Owens, of Wilson Boulevard, Va.

Morrison, assistant manager of a five and ten cent store, was about to put the money in a night repository of a bank across from the Treasury when the bandits slugged him and seized the paper package of currency. Scores of passersby at Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue started in pursuit at Morrison's cries and one of the robbers fired a wild shot.

Miss Negri said:

"I can sympathize with Miss McCormic over Serge's divorce tactics. What is the use of mincing words? Mary is right in what she says about him.

TAMMANY FOES POINT M'KEE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—With formal announcement of his candidacy for Mayor expected from Joseph V. McKee today or tomorrow, New York's political pot seethed today.

McKee was formally requested to enter the mayoralty race by former Representative Loring M. Black, who opposed Mayor John P. O'Brien in the Democratic primary, and a group of Black's campaign workers.

Tammany Hall, meantime, remained undisturbed on the surface by threat of the former aldermanic president to project himself into the campaign.

But Langdon W. Post, former Assemblyman and Fusion candidate for borough president of Manhattan, opposed McKee's candidacy. He returned from Washington, where he was to ask President Roosevelt to take no part in the local campaign.

Post said he had not seen the President in Washington, but according to political circles here, Mr. Roosevelt has decided upon a strict "hands off" policy for the municipal fight and would not influence the election or McKee one way or another.

DEPUTY SEARCHING A MINE PARADER FOR HIDDEN ARMS

REICH SUSPECT ADMITS FIRES

LEIPZIG, Germany, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The picture of the flames in the German Reichstag Building last February became more vivid today as the alleged incendiarism of Marinus van der Lubbe became the subject of the arson trial of himself and four others.

The young Dutch brickmason was confronted with detailed confessions he was said to have given authorities regarding fires in a welfare office, the Berlin City Hall and the former Imperial Palace a few days prior to the Reichstag blaze.

During the hearing he slumped over in his seat until his head almost touched his knees, his replies to questions came a little more readily than in previous testimony, but they continued to be contradictory.

In monosyllables he admitted having set the fires with rags soaked in gasoline.

The prison physician told correspondents he did not believe van der Lubbe would collapse, as was reported last week.

Chaplin Sons to Get 'Only' $350 a Month

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26.—Charles Spencer Chaplin, Jr., 8, and Earl Chaplin, 7, the two sons of Charles Chaplin, film comedy king, each will have to get along on $350 a month.

After criticizing the fifth annual accounting of Chaplin's former wife, Lita Grey Chaplin, as "vague and unsatisfactory," Superior Judge Charles Crail today had ordered the monthly allowance on each boy cut from $500 to $350.

Chaplin's attorneys had filed an exception to his former wife's accounting showing she had spent $33,994.62 for the boys' support during the 22 months ending last July.

While Mrs. Chaplin was testifying yesterday she collapsed in a tearful rage.

Chaplin's attorneys attempted to interrogate her on several items listed in her report of expenditures for the children. She sobbed:

"I can't answer. I can't keep figures in my head. I wish the father had the boys' interest at heart as much as I have."

The attorneys had sought to question the irate beauty about $2.50 listed as the price of a boy's haircut, $5 for removal of a wart from Charles, Jr.'s hand, about $7,000 for a European trip, and other expenses.

New Death Confession Seeks to Free Nurse

International News Service.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Sept. 26.—A second weird letter, allegedly written by J. J. Noble, war veteran of Oshawa, Ont., in connection with the Frank J. M. Grace murder case, was received today by District Attorney J. F. Murphy.

Noble last week wrote to Frieda Wilhelmina Weltz, San Francisco nurse who shot Grace, offering to pay the death penalty or serve her sentence in the event she is found guilty.

The second letter, dated September 19 and postmarked from Oshawa, Ont., read:

"To Prosecutor, J. F. Murphy:

"She is not guilty. I and another man, whose name I can't recall, took aboard the boat about 10:30 a. m., one half dozen boxes containing each 50 sticks giant powder of 100 per cent in place of one-half dozen boxes of hard tack and it blew up and killed and injured about 3 a. m.

"Nurse Weltz did not kill Mr. Grace nor anyone else connected with him. I and another man did, but not intentionally.

"But as she saved my life twice while I was in the United States Army during the war I am willing to take her sentence whether it is death or prison because she is very much beloved by me.

"Only if I take her place I wish that $5,000 will be given to my only dependent living with me. I also burnt with gas a boxcar at N. station containing one man, three women and five little girls—S & A—Sergeant Coe."

Murphy has asked Ontario police to investigate.

DIVORCEE SLAIN, ESCORT DEAD

BERKELEY, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Belief that Mrs. Naomi R. McSwain, Berkeley divorcee, was shot to death as she powdered her face by Maurice R. Roedere, who then committed suicide, was expressed by police here today.

Mrs. McSwain, about 40 years old and mother of three children, and Roedere, about 50, were found dead in the front seat of an automobile in a lonely section of the Berkeley Hills yesterday.

Near Mrs. McSwain's hand, officers said, lay an empty vanity case. The powder puff and other contents were scattered at her feet. She had been shot through the head.

Roedere, former purchasing agent for a cement company, was also shot through the head. A .38-caliber revolver was clutched in his hand.

COAL MEN HERE PREPARE FOR CODE RULES

Coal operators connected with the Coal Control Association of Western Pennsylvania have set up all necessary administrative machinery to make their code effective October 2.

This announcement was made by J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company and newly-elected president of the association, following a lengthy session of the operators yesterday at the William Penn Hotel.

FACTS REVEALED

Among the interests represented at the meeting were the captive mines of the Duquesne Light Company and the West Penn Power Company in the Allegheny Valley. That agreements with the United Mine Workers virtually had been completed with these two companies had been revealed by P. T. Fagan, president of District 5, U. M. W.

Fagan was in conference with officials of various local unions during the greater part of yesterday in efforts to get a resumption of work in mines where operators have agreed to a code.

PRESSURE ON FRICKS

The attitude of the H. C. Frick Coke Company for the present appears the most important factor in the strike situation. Reports from Washington indicated increasing pressure on the Frick company from the higher-ups in the United States Steel Corporation, of which it is a subsidiary, to sign the code.

At the same time came word from sources close to John L. Lewis, president of the U. M. W., that the Frick company, to satisfy the union, must agree to the collective bargaining principle just as the other signatories.

Fagan has stated that for the time union officials will concentrate in the Allegheny Valley district in the effort to get men back to work, thus giving rise to the belief that the two captive mines there, which have reached an agreement, may be the entering wedge in dealing with other captive producers.

OFFICERS NAMED

New officers were elected by the Coal Control Association yesterday as follows: President, Mr. Morrow; vice president, Scott Stewart, of the W. J. Rainey Company; secretary-treasurer, Byron H. Canon, of the Fort Pitt Collieries Company; directors, Mr. Morrow, Mr. Stewart, J. T. M. Stoneroad, of the Carnegie Coal Company; W. W. Keefer, of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation; George H. Love, of the Union Collieries Company; R. H. Knode, of the Westmoreland Coal Company; A. R. Budd, of the Hillman Coal and Coke Company; C. F. Hosford, Jr., of the Butler Consolidated Coal Company; H. F. Bovard, of the Keystone Coal and Coke Company; R. E. Jamison, of the Jamison Coal and Coke Company; J. G. Hoffstot, of the Lincoln Gas Coal Company, and H. L. Findlay, of the Y. and O. Coal Company.

FRICK CO. MUM ON CODE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—NRA officials today said they had heard nothing from the H. C. Frick Coke Company and other operators of "captive" coal mines regarding their present attitude on the coal code, which becomes effective next Monday.

These operators were understood to be willing to adopt the code's labor provision, but want assurance of exemption from commercial regulation.

Officials expressed an informal opinion that there should be no difficulty on this point since the "captives" do not sell coal, but produce it only for the mills controlling them. The Frick mines have been the center of labor disturbances during the prolonged code negotiations. The national administration is anxious to have this disturbance ended as quickly as possible.

Alabama operators today sought further discussions with NRA officials on the wage rates to be paid in their district. At the same time West Kentucky representatives proposed a base wage rate, unofficially regarded as acceptable, of $4 a day for inside workers and $3 outside.

PICKETS HALT COAL TRUCKS

Four hundred picketing miners halted trucks attempting to enter the docks of the Hillman Coal and Coke Company at Dravosburg today. There was no disorder.

The failure of the docks to operate tied up much of McKeesport's supply of coal for domestic purposes.

Mine Strikers Stage Clairton Demonstrations

are getting a taste of your own medicine you run to me for help. I have already suppressed the violence of your deputy sheriffs in Fayette County."

Hughes had asked the Governor to prevent the miners from parading through Clairton in their attempt to call out workers of the Carnegie Steel Comapny.

SCHOOLS DISMISSED

To prevent school children of Clairton becoming involved in possible outbreaks, Supt. of Schools H. D. Teal dismissed the grade schools this afternoon and instructed the children to remain at home.

The invading miners were met at the Clairton-West Elizabeth line by Deputy Sheriff Clarence C. Mooar in charge of 46 deputies of Allegheny County and 40 state police of the Butler barricks, under command of Lieut. Y. T. M. Boettner and about 100 company and Clairton city police.

Leading the procession was an automobile in which were Steve Petronik, president of the Footedale mine local; John Honeychuck, president of the Allison local, and Tony Rose, in charge of picketing at Allison.

PICKETING BANNED

Petronik told Deputy Mooar:

"We will picket peacefully."

Mooar replied:

"You can't picket. You can parade in your machines and keep moving. We will give you all the breaks on earth, but we are not going to permit you to rile up this town. Unless you do as we say the tail end of this line will be the front end."

Petronik appealed to Lieut. Boettner, of the state police. After a conference with his associates, Boettner told him:

"Teh deputy sheriffs are in charge. You will have to do as they say. We are here to keep the peace."

The miners agreed. With an escort of police and reputies the cavalcade swung through State street and other principal thoroughfares.

From the front end of each automobile or truck floated the American flag.

Banners carried in the cars read:

"Frick company does not own us. We only work for them."

"United we stand. Divided we fall."

Lined along the streets were many of the employes of the Carnegie company employed at the world's largest by-product plant. To this plant comes coal mined by the Frick company miners in the Fayette County field. Both the Frick company and the Carnegie company are subsidiaries of the United States Steel Corporation.

Spectators made little comment. One remarked:

"What is this, an NRA parade?"

"Jion the union."

After the first procession, lasting 20 minutes, was over, the mniers' caravan departed, but returned an hour later and staged a second demonstration.

Then they retired to a field across the Clairton line in West Elizabeth and prepared to hold a mass meeting which they apparently hoped would be attended by workers of the Carnegie company.

The parading miners were made up of delegations from Lambert, Buffington, Footdale and Allison mines of the Frick company.

The Clairton works when running full, employes around 5,500 men. At present about 2,000 are employed.

CITE STRATEGY

Leaders of the "march on Clairton" pointed out the strategy of such a move. The miners could "remain out until Doomsday," they asserted, but the Clairton works could obtain coal with which to make coke from West Virginia and Kentucky fields. In fact the Carnegie Steel Company is now obtaining much of its supplay of coal from those sources, the mine leaders say.

Attempts to form a new union to be known as the "Brotherhood of United Miners" were reported under way in Fayette County. One report had 133 members of the new union in the employ of the operators and that the new organization was paying $10.35 for each new member.

Miss Charlotte E. Carr, State Secretary of Labor and Industry, visited the Indiana County mine area today with Joseph Washington and Stephen Raushenbush, field investigators of the department. She departed without making comment.

Meanwhile, pickets swarmed into new territory and spread their demand for a general "work holiday" with the result that many additional mines closed today.

In the Kiskiminetas valley 5,000 men laid down their tools as mines of the Hicks Coal Company and the Kiski Valley Coal Company closed. The American Sheet and Tin Plate Company and the West Leechburg Steel Company suspended operations.

Mines of the Rochester and Pittsburgh Coal Company in Indiana County were down with one exception.

Pickets forced suspension of several Allegheny County mines including that operated by James and Joseph Tucker, brothers, and employing 74 men near Gallatin. Also forced to suspend were the Bunola and McCracken mines.

CLEANING UNION PACT SIGNED BY 12 PLANTS

Operators of 12 plants have signed a wage agreement with the Cleaners and Dyers Union independently of the employers' organization, union officials announced today.

This break in the operators' solid front came as 15 other plant owners sought restraining orders against the union from Judge James H. Gray, and after strike sympathizers had smashed windows in two more shops.

Nathan Weiner, chairman of the strike committee, said names of the operators who signed would be disclosed after a conference under Chamber of Commerce auspices this afternoon.

HEARING SET

Judge Gray sett a hearing on the restraining order for tomorrow after questioning Attorney Harry I. Miller, representing the plants. Declaring he understood low wages were being paid workers, Judge Gray asked Miller if the industry was not governed by a code. Miller replied:

"Yes. We are offering higher wages than the code provides, but we can't pay what they demand. We've even offered to let the union auditors go over our books for 90 days to prove profits would not justify their demands."

The plants represented, which will later seek a temporary injunction, were ABC Cleaners, Howard Cleaners, Foster eRliable Cleaners, OK Cleaning Company, McKeesport Cleaning and Dyeing Company, Paulson Cleaning and Dyeing, Dutch Dry Cleaning Com-Consolidated Cleaning Shops, Duquesne Dye Works, Liberty Cleaning and Dyeing Company, Morgan Dye Works, Real Cleaners and Dyers, Sismour's, Famous Cleaning and Dyeing Company and A. and P. Cleaners and Dyers.

WINDOWS BROKEN

The windows broken were in the Howard Cleaners, Inc., 5102 Liberty avenue, and the Manor Cleaning and Dyeing Company at 2016 Center avenue.

The cleaners' and dyers' strike, as far as McKeesport and Clairton are concerned, was settled yesterday through the mediation of Mayor George H. Lysle, Police Chief John J. Whalen, of McKeesport, and Watson McKee, NRA mediator for that vicinity.

Employers recognized the union, agreed to a closed shop, promised to employ no workers under 17 and signed the following wage scale:

Silk spotters, $35 weekly; dyers, $22; male pressers, $22; wholesale drivers, $16.50 and 5 per cent of collections; retail drivers, $5 and 10 per cent; silk pressers, $14; helpers, $14; rough spotters, $14.

All the employers agreed to accept no work from territory west of McKeesport.

The wages granted represent an increase, according to McKee, of 50 to 100 per cent.

GREEN'S DEMAND

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A 35-hour week for the thousands of employes in what he called the "usually hazardous" cleaning and dyeing industry was asked today by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Opposing the 45-hour week asked by the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners, Green said that would neither absorb the unemployed nor sustain the health of workers in the industry.

He asked a $15 minimum wage for unskilled and $18 for skilled workers against minimums in the proposed code ranging from $12 to $14.

FORD IGNORED ON NRA BOARD

DETROIT, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A local NRA compliance board was named yesterday for suburban Dearborn, where the Ford Motor Company is located, but the board will have no authority to pass upon or discuss complaints lodged against the Ford company.

The membership of the board, chosen by the Dearborn NRA committee, does not include a representative either of the Ford company or its employes. Since there is a code for the automotive industry, the activities of the board in connection with the Ford company will be limited to reporting complaints to Washington.

About 200 men visited NRA headquarters during the day. The committee said some of them complained that they had been dismissed by the Ford company while in downtown Detroit the American Legion was selecting 5,000 veterans for Ford jobs. Others were said to have told the committee that they were war veterans and former Ford employes and felt they should have been given preference over veterans who had never worked there.

CLOSED SHOP VIOLATES NRA, LAWYER SAYS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Thousands of manufacturers over the nation were told last night by the National Association of Manufacturers that a closed union shop under which labor contracts were made with a single union would violate the intent of the recovery act.

This interpretation went out in a copyrighted bulletin prepared by John C. Gall, associate counsel of the association, and took direct issue with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The association also informed employers that under the law they could advise workers against joining a labor union or, within limits, offer special inducements, such as group insurance, to employes, who will join and bargain through a company union.

RAIL PRICES CUT

As the document went into the mails, President Roosevelt at the White House was seeking new stimulus for the recovery program through loans to the railroads with which to buy steel rails if the steel companies would cut the prices.

At a conference with four leaders of the steel industry, Joseph B. Eastman, the rail coordinator, and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the NRA, Mr. Roosevelt obtained agreement for "competitive bids" upon between 600,000 and 700,000 tons of rails. The money needed would be loaned the railroads from the public works fund.

Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, was unable to attend the conference, being confined to Walter Reed Hospital with an infection.

The bulletin of the Manufacturers' Association was interpreted by NRA officials as widening the breach between capital and labor over the labor section of the recovery act that guarantees the right of workers to bargain collectively in any manner they choose without interference or coercion from employers.

GREEN'S CHARGES

Green, only last week, charged that "astonishing evasions" of the law were being practiced by big companies in furthering company unions, which are made up of employes of single plants.

Replying to Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Green said the recovery act did not prohibit the closed shop.

Gall said that "since the recovery act leaves to the employe the clear option as to the form of collective bargaining he desires, if any, there is no difference whatever under the law between a company union, on the one hand, and an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, on the other." He said:

"Either a closed shop agreement is invalid whether made with one or the other types of labor organizations, or both kinds of closed shop agreements are valid, and by a bona fide agreement with the employes through a company union the employer may outlaw other unions in his plant."

The attorney added a belief that both forms of closed shop were invalid.

Regarding inducements to furthere company unions, Gall said it was a legal practice "so long as the employer does not use coercive methods to cause the employe to select that method of dealing with him."

The legal interpretation of the association also told members that several different types of collective bargaining might conceivably be employed in one plant if the workers so chose.

MELLON NAMED IN CODE FIGHT

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The anti-monopoly amendment of the National Recovery Act was injected into a code battle for the first time today when the issue was raised by independent manufacturers against the Mellon-controlled Aluminum Company of America.

The independents planned to carry their fight into the code hearing which opens Thursday, demanding separate treatment for the Aluminum Company on the ground it is a monopoly.

The code of fair competition, as presented, provides for one code to cover the production of raw aluminum and fabrication.

Under the Borah amendment the NRA is directed not to approve any code which permits monopolies or monopolistic practices.

PA. RETAILERS ASK APPROVAL OF CODE SOON

HARRISBURG, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Adopting a resolution which says further delay in approval of the retail code "serves the interests of retailers who are not co-operating in the President's re-employment program," the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Retailers' Association urged immediate approval of the pact.

The resolution, adopted yesterday at a meeting in Harrisburg, was telegraphed to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, with the request for action.

AVOID CONTROVERSY

John E. Means, secretary of the association, said none of the controversial sections of the code was discussed officially.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Harry D. Adamy, Wilkes-Barre merchant and vice president of the group, called upon merchants to fight any attempt at the forthcoming special session of the Legislature to put over another sales tax. He said:

"If the $25,000,000 bond issue is defeated in November, the report probably will be a demand for state revenue from other sources, and the merchants of the state should rally now to oppose re-enactment of the sales tax with which retail stores were burdened last fall and last spring."

A special sales tax was levied in August, 1932, for relief purposes. The tax, a part of emergency legislation, automatically ceased early this year. The bond issue to be voted on in November is to provide relief funds.

CODE COMPROMISE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—A compromise plan to end the acute row over the proposed 10 per cent loss limitation provision of the code of fair competition for 1,500,000 retailers was under consideration today by NRA officials.

The Consumers Advisory Board of the NRA, which has waged a strong fight against the proposal to prohibit retail sales for less than wholesale cost, plus 10 per cent, was urging a compromise.

Agreeing with retailers that cut-throat price competition is depressing business over the entire country, the consumers' board was willing, with modifications, to have a provision written into the code preventing sales below invoice cost.

Prize Winning Recipes in Prudence Penny Contest

If splendid appetizing recipes keep coming into the Sun-Telegraph as they have been coming in for a week, the monotony of preparing and serving good things for the family to eat will soon be broken. Prudence Penny, you know, is awarding $15 in cash prizes every day for the favorite recipes of the housewives of Pittsburgh and vicinity. The one recipe considered by the judges to be the best for the day is awarded $5—10 others get $1 each.

It has already been demonstrated that there are many housewives among the readers of the Sun-Telegraph who are really proud of their favorites, and, from a survey of the recipes already awarded prizes, it is evident that they have excellent reason to be proud.

If you have a home recipe of your own that your friends have tried and asked for, send it to Prudence Penny, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. It may win a prize. And if it does win and is printed it will be a valuable aid to other housewives in their daily problem of home cooking.

The judges who award the daily prizes are Chef de Cuisine Louis Jousse, Hotel Schenley, and Camille Mauclair, Chef de Cuisine of the Hotel William Penn.

COTTAGE CHEESE MARSHMALLOW ROLL

Ten large graham crackers.
One pound cottage cheese.
One-half cup heavy cream.
One-half pound pitted dates, sliced.
One-half pound finely chopped walnut meats.

Crush graham crackers with a rolling pin, reserve a third of the crumbs for the outside coating and add the remainder to the sieved cottage cheese. Add the cream, chopped dates, and marshmallows which have been cut in quarters with hot scissors. Add half of the nuts and mix well. Form into a loaf or a long roll and coat with cracker crumbs and finally with the chopped nuts and meats. Wrap lightly in waxed paper and place in coldest part of refrigerator for a few hours, preferably over night. Slice and serve as salad or dessert.

TEN PRIZES OF $1 EACH

Two cups figs.
Two cups pitted dates.
One cup seeded raisins.
One cup currants.
One cup prunes.
One cup apricots.
One cup salted pecan nut meats.
Two tablespoons orange juice.

Wash currants, prunes and apricots. Drain and dry between folds of clean towel. Grind all fruit through food chopper and add chopped nuts (rub as much salt from nuts as possible before chopping). Add orange juice and mix all thoroughly. Place in a bowl under a weight (use an iron). Let stand 24 hours, slice ½-inch thick, cut in strips 2 inches long and 1-inch wide. Roll in granulated sugar and place on waxed paper for several hours to dry. This makes a delicious sweet for afternoon teas and a wholesome confection for the children's lunch box.

Mix all ingredients well together, shape into a loaf, and place on heavy wax paper. Slip the loaf, paper and all, on a rack in an open roasting pan and cook in a moderately hot oven. Do not add water and do not cover. The meat should become well browned and retain its juiciness. Garnish with Belgian bananas.

BELGIAN BANANAS

One-third cup butter.
Three-fourths cup sugar.
One-third cup lemon juice.
One-half cup orange juice.

Method: Let butter, sugar, lemon juice and orange juice stand over hot water until melted. Arrange small ripe bananas in a shallow pan, cover with sauce and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes, basting frequently.

The Run on our Clothing Stocks is developing into a Stampede!

WE'RE passing up extra profits for public favor, in maintaining our old prices on fall suits and topcoats this season, in the face of general advances, but our success is giving us concern, for it is beginning to look as though our well-laid plans may not hold out the entire season. When we placed our fall orders, months ago, to get the benefit of the lower prices then prevailing, we thought that we had provided amply for the entire season. But we underestimated the number of men who are ready for new clothes, and also how alone we would be in our values.

When replacement time comes, our prices will have to be revised on the basis of current costs (although we're looking ahead here, too) . . . but while present stocks are complete—and they still are—these Horne qualities are yours to profit by, as you will, at these old prices.

FUND FOR NEW BANK MOUNTS IN CRAFTON

With 60 per cent of the necessary $110,000 for capital and surplus subscribed to open the proposed Crafton National bank, a drive to raise the balance was being conducted today by the depositors' committee of the First National Bank of Crafton, which has been operating under restrictions since the banking holiday.

Under a plan approved by the Comptroller of the Currency, 60 per cent of the old bank's deposits would become available to depositors upon opening of the new bank, Roy A. MacGregor, chairman of the committee, pointed out at a meeting of depositors in the Crafton High School last night. From the available 60 per cent, depositors are being asked to purchase partnership certificates.

Prospective subscribers will be solicited by members of the depositors' committee of 50 throughout this week. Shares will be sold at $110 each. The amount to be raised is $50,000.

Speakers were Dr. I. B. Reed, former president of the First National Bank; J. W. Giffen, conservator and cashier of the old bank; F. C. Hopper, cashier of the new Union National Bank of Carnegie, and Senator Frank J. Harris. MacGregor presided.

Wildcat Scatters Race Track 'Kitties'

BYRON, Cal., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The "kitties" which Charlie Hohman trained for his proposed cat race certainly ran, but it was a scatteration rather than a race.

At a tryout at which Byron's sportsmen had gathered, Tom Smith, just down from the hills, opened a sack and deposited a wildcat right among those racing kitties. All bets were off.

INCENSE SMOKE FOR STOKOWSKI

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Ultra-modern in things musical, Leopold Stokowski, blond maestro of the Philadelphia Orchestra, has reverted to the age-old Chinese in one personal habit. He burns Chinese incense instead of smoking cigarets.

Taking imaginary puffs at the incense, he explains:

"Something told me last February I did not care to smoke any more. So I stopped and light incense instead."

GOODBYE breakfast monotony! We're greeting the new day with an utterly new type cereal! The first really all-new cereal in years!

Not like any other cereal

It's called Wheat Crackels. It's made by compressing the richest energy parts of wheat under 5000 pounds pressure to the square inch. This dextrinizes the starch granules. Increases ease and speed of digestibility.

Then we whirl the wheat in seething cyclones of 550° of heat. The tiny wheat hearts puff. Expand. Explode! Into delicious tissue walled tidbits. Toasted and flavored to the Queen's taste. New in appearance, taste and flavor.

Children and grown-ups alike prefer this cereal

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(And they call me a Smart Aleck!)

That the Dolbear Theory offers this one: That if you count the number of chirps a cricket cricks in a minute—divide the number by 4 and then add 50, you get the temperature of where you are.

That a new law in Spain prohibits tipping of any kind.

That there is a tree in India called the Pipal Tree on which expectant mothers hang presents—in hopes that their new-born will be a male. (Females have no rights in India.)

That in St. Petersburg, Fla., where it usually is very hot—the postoffice keeps its stamps in a refrigerator.

That Andrew Carnegie, a Scotchman, gave away about 250 million smackers endowing universities, libraries, etc. He also donated 8,000 organs to churches and aided charities. (Yet, the Scotch are supposed to be stingy!)

That the Japanese have invented an automobile that runs by clockwork. (One winding and it goes 40 miles.)

That the Rio Vinagare in South America flows almost pure vinegar.

That hundreds of miles of Death Valley, California, are honeycombed by small springs and brooks, yet all the water is poisonous — because it contains arsenic. (Nature, however, provided "barrel cactus.")

That red neon signs penetrate further in rainy weather and fog than in clear atmosphere.

That there is a peculiar plant which grows profusely in Nicaragua and other countries where earthquakes happen often. It keels over and dies two hours before the earth tremors—giving natives ample warning to scram.

That it took over 10 years to sell the first 60 copies of "Moby Dick," yet a copy recently sold for $1,500.

That beauties who broadcast via television must use black lipstip—because red rouge turns out ashen grey.

That when they want the effect of a crackling fire on the radio—they crumple cellophane against the microphone.

That there is a man without a country who has been traveling on the Holland-American fleet throughout the world for several months. To date he has cost them $18,000—no port will accept him.

That TNT, the most deadly explosive in the world, was invented by a doctor—who is a confirmed pacifist.

That in Madras, India, a yogi is able to surround you with any odor or fragrance you command. There may be a thousand people in the same room and all will sniff roses when he calls for it. (Hypnosis?)

That you really can go to Hell—which is a town in Norway.

That Austrians here now state that during the war French army authorities in Paris were notified in time exactly where in Paris each shell would land so that non-combatants could escape.

That zebras in the zoo have never been known to utter a sound. In Africa they are considered the noisest animals in the Veldt.

That if you are the only passenger in an elevator and you go to the skyscraper's 50th floor it costs the building 12 cents.

That St. Paul is supposed to be America's cleanest city.

That the crew of the U. S. S. Richmond pay for the daily movies and are allowed seating space after the officers get theirs.

That Rudy Vallee tried out for the Glee Club when he was at Yale and didn't make it. (They couldn't pay him, today!)

That a rainbow in the morning is a sign that it will rain.

That a drunk, they claim, can be sobered by hypnosis.

That drunks are rarely brusised or hurt when they tumble and fall. Injury usually is caused when you tighten your muscles.

That Annette Kellerman, the best known of the femme divers, whose figure was flawless, was a cripple when a tot.

That one of the more potent concoctions is letting the air into a cocoanut, adding a bit of sugar and then rest on ice.

That Loretta Young and Madge Evans are the only child movie stars who returned when they matured and reached stellar heights.

That the "bronze plaques" awarded by this and that organization in H'wood to "the best" picture or player are made of papier-mache!

That the French cannot disinherit their children.

That Florida and not Nevada is the easiest state in which to gea a divorce. You can get a divorce there if she can't cook!

That the New York Supreme Court judges get more than the Chief Justice of the country, who can give orders to the Pres.

That the diamond stone in an engagement ring was so selected, they say, because in the middle-ages the diamond meant peace.

That all over the civilized world woman is the standard of beauty except in Greece—where man is.

That the average annual salary of the president of a life insurance company is $70,000. (Pin money? Diamond pins!)

Gary Cooper's Hobby Is Horticulture

Passion fruit, pomegranates, dates, grapefruit and tomatoes are the hobbies of Gary Cooper, Paramount star. He owns a 5,000-acre ranch about 90 miles from Los Angeles, where he goes for quiet and to watch the progress of the experiments of his foreman, who is developing new fruits in the manner of the late Luther Burbank. Experiments also are being conducted with fruits that never before were grown in the locality. Whatever he discovers will be made available to other ranchers, Cooper said, while at work in Ernst Lubitsch's production of Noel Coward's "Design for Living."

O'Neill World Premiere Of 'Ah, Wilderness!' Hit In Nixon

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Once again Eugene O'Neill has done the unexpected—for his new play, "Ah, Wilderness!" which had its world premiere at the Nixon Theater last night, is about as unlike an O'Neill play as it could be. With the exception of one scene that smelled strongly of "Anna Christie," here was an idyl of calf love which in another scene of moonlight and soft music rose to the glamorous ecstasy of "Romeo and Juliet."

The play is a comedy of characters, and of these characters George M. Cohan is the richest, deepest and most human. He is a Yankee father who is confronted with the problem of an adolescent son who is filled with poetry and rebellion. Sentiment, kindliness, deep understanding and a rare quality of quiet humor made Cohan's portrayal of the father an outstanding artistic achievement. The quality of this comedian has ripened and mellowed with the years—until it is difficult to dissociate affection for the man from admiration for the artist.

Mr. Seibel

But besides Nat Miller, which is the Cohan role, there are fourteen other diversified and well-rounded characters in the four acts and seven scenes of the comedy. They take their time in getting the story told, and it is like seeing life lived by people who were just beginning to taste the rush and hurry of the automobile age, for the period is 1906.

MAY BE A MEMORY

The subtitle of the play, "A Comedy of Recollection," gives rise to the thought that O'Neill went back to his own boyhood for some of the episodes and scenes. Essentially it is the love story of the poetic lad played by Elisha Cook, Jr., with almost inspired awkwardness. His bashful bravado, his romantic lies, his comical despair, made of young Richard a portrayal that would have filled any psychologist with joy.

Then there was the altogether admirable characterization of the tipsy brother-in-law by Gene Lockhart. He represents one of those irrepressible types that never grow up. Weak-willed, he is his own worst enemy. He is now merry, now sobbing, laughing through his tears, and at last snoring peacefully as the family crisis comes to a climax. Lockhart's drunken scene was one of the most amusing things in the most amusing comedy, and the family dinner during which it occurs was about the most perfectly natural stage dinner ever eaten.

Another outstanding characterization was the repressed spinster played so finely by Eda Heineman. The telling portrayal of an unattractive character is the supreme test of an actor, and even more of an actress. Her moments of hysteria were high points of natural art.

ABOUT PERFECT CAST

It was just about a perfect cast. Marjorie Marquis as the mother was the complete incarnation of a New England conscience. William Post, Adelaide Bean and Walter Vonnegut as the children were as natural as if they had been born amid that wonderful Belasco-like setting provided by Robert Edmond Jones. Ruth Gilbert gave a vibrant and luscious revelation of girlish innocence and love. Ruth Holden was hard-boiled without being offensive—an unpleasant portrait etched with acid. Richard Sterling, John Wynne, Donald McClelland and John Butler had bits that were vivid though brief—and the Nora of Ruth Chorpenning was altogether too brief to give her pervasive humor full play.

It was an almost ideal cast, perfectly paced by Philip Moeller's fine directorial sense. It made the play—for this is a comedy of character. It has rich humorous lines, but they belong to the characters. Just as in "Another Language," the truth of the characters is the impulse of the play. The story of the boy whose love for the girl is crossed by an unromantic parent is not essentially a dramatic story. Great acting makes it so—and great acting made the audience forget that this play took three full hours for its presentation.

But since O'Neill has been running to trilogies and nine act dramas, perhaps he ought to be praised for his admirable spirit of restraint and condensation. "Ah, Wilderness!" is different—and it's good—good as a New England Thanksgiving dinner.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The talking-picture version of the George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber stage success, "Dinner at Eight," which ran on Broadway for more than a year, will come to the Nixon for an engagement that will open next Monday evening, October 2. There will be two performances daily, matinee and evening, all seats reserved. The largest group of stars ever gathered together in the history of motion pictures, surpassing even the celebrated cast of "Grand Hotel," will be seen in "Dinner at Eight." There are no less than 14 outstanding film names in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, with Marie Dressler heading the cast in the role of an old-time musical comedy star whose faded glories have not impaired her sense of humor. The seat sale will open Thursday.

Acts from the Pantages Circuit will make up the vaudeville bills to be presented in the Pitt, the opening of which will begin Friday. Besides the variety offerings there also will be a feature picture. Frank Richardson, the Talkies' Smiling Singer; the Great Noel Lester, a magical surprise; Hal Skelly's Sisters, and many other artists will appear on the opening bill. The film will be a musical comedy drama, "Dance, Girl, Dance," with Evalyn Knapp and Alan Dinehart in the leading roles. Performances will be continuous from noon to 11 p. m.

Longest Cast Likely For 'Alice' Film

When the cast of Paramount's production of "Alice in Wonderland" is finally completed it probably will be the longest ever to receive screen credit. Forty-six persons will have important parts, ranging from Alice to the gardener. Fourteen roles have been definitely assigned to date, and production is well under way on the principal scenes.

Recent additions to the cast include Patsy O'Byrne, who insists she is "the ugliest woman in pictures," for the first time in a "nice" role. She is teamed with Leon Errol, and plays the role of Alice's aunt. Heretofore the screen has seen her only as a slovenly landlady, a narcotic fiend, or an underworld hag.

All in a Day

Pals.

TWO LITTLE hoodlums. By no stretch of the imagination could they be called anything else. Little toughs. Standing in front of Rector's—the Rector's in the year of grace 1915, slugging to their hearts' content. Their faces are smeared with dirt and blood. Their newspapers lie scattered on the sidewalk.

Then somebody says: "Cheezit the cop!" Without a word, both boys dart off together and disappear around Forty-eighth street. When they reach Sixth avenue, they dive into a hallway, exhausted.

Timmy speaks first.

"You're a pretty good pug," he pants. "Not bad, kid."

Andy cups his hand to his eye. "But you're too fast for me," he says, "I ain't got no wind. Too many cigarettes."

Timmy grins.

"That right of yours almost killed me. If it hadda gone on for two minutes more, I wouldda been finished."

"In two minutes," Andy smiles, "I couldna punched my way out of a cream puff. The wind was gone. You're fast kid."

Timmy sticks out his hand.

"Waddya say?" he asks. "Wanna forget it? We can both sell papers in front of Rector's And between us, we'll keep everybody else off the spot. Ya with me?"

Andy grasps the proffered hand wearily.

"Sure," he says, "why not?"

And thus a beautiful friendship budded. A friendship that would make Damon and Pythias look as affectionate as two columnists who have just published the same story.

Thus Timmy and Andy grew up together. Neither of them had relatives. So they roomed together, and, as years went by, they progressed from selling papers to the petty rackets. And there to safe cracking.

The boys did very well by themselves. They played a cagey game, bided their time, and kept their business to themselves. So you can imagine what happened when Timmy met Marion.

Andy pleaded with his pal to forget the girl. He pleaded in the name of their friendship—which is a deuce in the game of love. He begged Timmy to steer clear of the girl, to let well enough alone.

But Timmy was in love. And love is not only blind, it's deaf and dumb as well. Within three weeks, he had married the girl. And within three minutes after the ceremony, Andy was a heartbroken guy.

It took Timmy a long while to convince Andy that Marion could be trusted. And, even when Andy finally admitted that the girl wasn't "so bad after all," he was reluctant to talk when she was present.

More years sailed by. And, in those years, Marion proved her worth many, many times. When Andy was first arrested, she was the one who dug up the bail money. And she was the one whose advice was sanest when the trial came up. Yet, even after the acquittal, Andy gave no credit to Marion for his release.

And thus these three people went through life. Andy was nuts about Timmy. Timmy was nuts about Marion. And Marion thought Andy was nuts . . .

It was about a year ago when Andy and Timmy decided to do a job in Jersey. The place was a silk factory near Paterson, and it was a cinch that the office safe contained between $15,000 and $20,000 every Friday night.

So Timmy went over to "spot" the job for a few days. His duty was to stand around, observe the hours and habits of the office force and remember everything he saw.

He was over there three days when Marion ran up to him.

"Timmy," she said breathlessly. "I hunted all over for you. Andy's been pinched. He's in the Tombs right now."

"Now wait a minute," said Timmy. "Let's get away from this spot before you begin to talk."

They walked to the railroad station. On the way his wife explained what had happened. This morning two detectives had grabbed Andy as he was leaving his apartment and arrested him for a holdup that took place the night before.

"Stickup?" repeated Timmy. "Why, that isn't Andy's line at all."

"I know," replied Marion. "But they got him just the same. And if you think you can get him out of that cast-iron jug by telling the judge that it's not his line, try it."

"Well," said Timmy quietly, "it's a cinch, anyway. He wasn't in on the job, was he? Okay. They can't prove he did it. It's a cinch, kid. A positive cinch."

Marion sighed.

"In the first place," she said, "they don't have to prove it. Andy has a record. A nice record. And he can be sentenced easily on the flimsiest kind of circumstantial evidence. Besides, he has no alibi."

"Where was he when it happened?"

"Home, all by his lonesome. And nobody can prove it—least of all, Andy."

Timmy thought all the way to New York. And when he reached West street he had a beautiful plan in mind. He told it to Andy first and Andy refused to go through with it. And the same went for Marion.

In the windup, they had to agree. Because Timmy pointed out that it was the only alibi they had. And if Andy was to be kept from serving a long jail sentence, an alibi was most certainly needed.

In court, Marion went through with her part. She, a woman with no record, said that Andy could not have committed the crime in question because he was in her apartment, while her husband was away, when the crime was committed.

And Andy, on the stand, said the same thing . . .

When Andy left court, a free man, Timmy was jubilant. He turned to Marion.

'See, Baby,' he said happily. "It was a lousy thing for me to ask you to do—lie like that about cheating on me—but it couldn't be helped. It was the only way. Ain't I right, Andy?"

Andy hung his head gloomily.

"Guess so," he said.

Timmy grinned.

"Well," he said, "if you folks will pardon me a moment, I'll go in this store and phone Mack. We oughta celebrate tonight. I'll tell him to bring up a case of three star."

Timmy walked into the store. Andy and Marion stood outside. They said nothing. Finally Andy turned to his pal's wife.

"I'm sorry, Marion," he said simply. "I hated to have you go through all that—in court."

Marion smiled faintly.

"Forget it," she said easily. "It was nothing. But when Timmy first suggested it I almost died. I thought he knew for sure that you really were in my apartment that night!"...

Acclaim of French Thrills Mae West

Mae West derives an especial thrill from the cabled news that Paris, after viewing "She Done Him Wrong," has acclaimed her as an artist comparable to Rejane, Sarah Bernhardt and other theatrical immortals. Mae's mother, who inspired her acting career, was a Frenchwoman, born in Paris, and used to tell her daughter stories about the Divine Sarah.

"I wish my mother could have lived," said the star of "I'm No Angel," "to know that her daughter was even so much as mentioned in the same breath with Bernhardt, whom she admired so greatly."

'Slow Poke' Portrays 'Lazy Bones'

"Slow Poke," in which Stepin Fetchit, Negro comedy star, plays the title role, has been completed as the first release in Educational's new Song Hit Story series. The picture is a dramatization of the popular tune, "Lazy Bones." The idea of this new series is to tell a story which might have inspired the creation of a current song hit.

Miss Eilers Is Out of Picture

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.—In the light of the rumors linking the names of Sally Eilers and James Dunn, Hollywood is intrigued to learn that Sally has been raising vigorous protest over the picture they were supposed to do together.

The disagreement has gone so far, in fact, that Sol Wurtzel has decided to let Claire Trevor have the feminine lead in "Jimmy and Sally."

Here's what Sally has to say about it:

"My part was not as strong as Jimmy's and if they are going to co-star us, I think our roles ought to be of equal importance.

"I didn't turn down the picture. I haven't had a chance to talk it over with the studio."

Evidently the studio has decided it isn't necessary to talk it over any further—even if they have to change the title of the picture.

For weeks, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been seeking a child actress to play Greta Garbo as a girl in "Queen Christina." After 200 children had been tested, Director Rouben Mammoulian led little Cora Sue Collins onto the set, dressed in regal robes.

The youngster walked shyly up to the Swedish star. Garbo looked at her for a moment, then bent down and caught Cora Sue up in her arms.

"This little girl is me," she said simply.

Vince Barnett, Hollywood's professional insulter, pulled his most audacious rib recently when he bearded the foreman of the Los Angeles grand jury. With everyone else in on the gag, they led Vince into the grand jury room as a supposed witness in a $250,000 bond theft case. Dr. William A. Griffith, one-time chief auditor for the city of New York, was presiding. He asked Vince his name and Vince refused to give it. He also refused to be sworn. Then, committing the ultimate act of lese majeste, he began to question the foreman. This was too much. Dr. Griffith called for a bailiff and was ordering Vince to be carried off to jail when fellow members explained the rib.

CARRIES ALL-BRAN ON EVERY VOYAGE

Seaman Finds This Delicious Cereal Relieves Constipation

Here is an unsolicited letter from Mr. Darragh:

"I have been going to sea for the past fourteen years. Every trip, I underwent severe headaches, nervousness, and sleeplessnes. Tried all sorts of remedies, and received only temporary relief.

"So hearing about Kellogg's ALL-BRAN thought I would get a box, which I did. That was six months ago, haven't been without it at home, and when I go to sea a box of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is always with me."—George D. Darragh, 1914 32nd Avenue, Oakland, California.

Tests show ALL-BRAN contains two things for common constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

How much pleasanter this is than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily will correct most types of constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve as a cereal or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Local Highlights On WJAS Tonight

Charles Curran, tenor, returns to the air waves after several months absence with a program at 10:45. He plans to feature both old and new favorites.

Last week Dr. Springer discussed religion. Tonight it may be an event of national importance. Listen to him at 7:15.

Announcers Named For Baseball

By AIRCASTER

In kind, but none the less firm language, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis decided in Chicago over the week-end, just what will be served up to the radio listener in the way of world series fare, the first course of which will be served on Tuesday, October 3.

It is the annual job of the judge to say who shall and who shall not broadcast the series, and which observers are to be allowed to describe the goings on in the field.

Among the notable dicti handed down to the networks on Saturday were these:

Judge's Verdict

The National Broadcasting Company choice of Tom Manning and Hal Totten, Chicago experts, to describe, but not umpire the games, is approved, and Graham McNamee will be in the picture again to do the "color stuff" between innings.

The Columbia Broadcasting Company is forbidden to make use of the well-known Ted Husing, and must announce the fact. The judge approved WABC's tentative choice of Ford Frick for the job, and it appears that Mr. Frick will be assisted somewhat by a hitherto anonymous gent from Rochester, and another lad, unnamed, from Boston.

No microphones will be allowed on the field and no players will be permitted to broadcast until after each game.

The Amalgamated Broadcasting System, is forbidden to do the games, on the theory that it is a regional outfit. Individual stations that wish to broadcast the series can have it from either network on demand, if they are willing to pay the line charges.

And that's that, said the judge in effect—take it or leave it.

And the networks took it.

Someone has inquired why unfunny Milton Berle has been signed up for an extension with Fred Waring's otherwise excellent show. Search me!

Jealous?

The character of Jack Arnold, which so popularized itself in the Myrt and Marge series of yesteryear, will be missing this season. The lad who played it, you may remember as Winton Haworth. He's out of the cast.

And if you should ask me why, I'd be very likely to reply frankly that it's because his popularity was a menace to Myrt and Marge themselves.

The famous revellers quartet is about to undergo a bit of an upset, after all these years, by the loss of James Melton.

The outfit has an offer to tour Europe, but Melton can't go because of vaudeville and solo dates hereabouts.

Those same dates are making it impossible for him to spend the long hours of rehearsing with the other boys.

And so James has indicated that he will go along on his own, and the revellers most likely will invite Frank Parker to fill the vacancy, if Frank can see his way clear to Europe.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

If on the spur of the moment you should call someone a numismatist a sock on the eye might be your reward. But really it's perfectly all right. Charles Marketch, Ford City, is one and it's a good thing he is. He is able to set me right on an answer to a question concerning a 1910 nickel.

The question concerned its special value, if any. He says that an uncirculated 1910 nickel is worth 30 cents and a proof nickel is worth 50 cents. The nickel must be in proof or in circulated condition to command this value. I can't explain further.

If it weren't for Mrs. Jones, Donora, question about Indian Summer we never would have known that the term as well as the season originated in Pennsylvania about 1790. Now Indian Summer is a recognized literary term in Europe as well as America. It doesn't come until the last part of Autumn.

-:- How to Keep Well -:-

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

A recent news item describes the efforts of the United States public health service to combat that mysterious disease known as "sleeping sickness." An unusual increase in the number of cases of this ailment has been reported in the west and at one time the seriousness of the epidemic was alarming. Adequate measures taken by the Public Health Service Commission, as well as by local health authorities and medical societies, minimized the danger and the spread of this disease.

Dr. Copeland

Although the affliction has been known for many years, its cause has never been discovered. The disease has received the attention of medical research workers throughout the world.

The recent epidemic reported in this country is believed to have been caused by some insect that carries the germ of the disease. The insect has not, as yet, been isolated. Until this knowledge is obtained adequate measures for the prevention of the disease cannot be given. Meanwhile the usual methods of protection against infectious diseases, such as quarantine and isolation of usual cases of the disorder, are rigidly enforced.

Since the disease is always in our midst there is no need for undue alarm. Compared with other countries, we are indeed fortunate. Only a minimum number of cases of sleeping sickness is reported annually in the United States.

Occasionally, physicians encounter patients who complain of symptoms similar to those of sleeping sickness, but upon examination it is found that these persons are suffering from some other ailment. A victim of sleeping sickness is stricken with a slight fever and complains of increasing drowsiness. The symptoms may come on suddenly or graduaily.

As a rule, the patient seems to be suffering from a slight head cold. Although the eyelids of the victim are closed, he may be awake but in a condition of semi-stupor. In other cases the sufferer loses consciousness and may sleep for days or weeks. Occasionally the sleeping spells are interrupted by severe emotional disturbances, and maniacal demonstrations. The victim often becomes delirious.

In many cases of sleeping sickness the sufferers have been subjected to a spinal tap. In this procedure a small amount of fluid is withdrawn from the spinal canal and examined under a microscope.

Though the exact cause of the disease has not been discovered, there is some consolation in knowing that every endeavor is being made by scientists to isolate the germ of this disease and to establish a cure for it. Recently a serum, developed from the blood of former victims of sleeping sickness, was made, and it is hoped that this will serve as a cure for victims of this baffling disease.

FLOODS ADD TO BIG HURRICANE DEATH TOLL

picture of the destruction. They report bodies can be seen everywhere. Fully three-fourths of the coastal city is in ruins. A radio report sent by a Mexican military aviator and intercepted here, said two passenger trains and two freight trains had disappeared between Tampico and Cardenas.

Communication between Galveston, Tex., and Tampico, out out since Sunday, was restored.

MEXICO, D. F., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Mexico's resources were mobilized today to aid the storm-stricken and flooded city of Tampico, where estimates placed the number of hurricane dead or injured as high as 5,000 and thousands were left homeless. Enormous property damage was reported.

Two relief trains, carrying battalions of infantrymen to aid in reconstruction work and food and medical supplies, were en route to the oil port.

But parts of the city were under 14 feet of water and railroad tracks in the area were flooded or washed away, so it was problematical when they could arrive. A squadron of military airplanes was ordered to leave at dawn. Meanwhile, Tampico was virtually isolated from the outside world, along with its scenes of death and destruction.

Gen. Eduardo Vascenselos, secretary of the interior, who planned to fly to Tampico to direct relief work, said the number of dead "can not be stated exactly," but the military chief of the district reported by wireless that three-fourths of Tampico was destroyed with many victims.

It was feared that hundreds had been buried alive in the ruins. Flood waters of the Panuco and Tamesi rivers added their terrors to those of the hurricane.

Tampico was placed under martial law. Its harbor was closed to shipping. If airplanes could not get through to its flooded airport, it was believed days might elapse before relief could reach the city. Today the possibility of disease, it was thought here, might hold new dangers.

Recent figures put Tampico's population at 100,000. It is in the state of Tamaulipas and, located in a rich and semi-tropical district, is considered the most important port in Mexico. It is on the left bank of the busy Panuco River, seven miles from its mouth on the Gulf of Mexico.

Its poorer districts are only two or three feet above the river, but the better residential area is about 150 feet above the stream. It has had a rapid growth, partly because of oil resources.

FATAL QUAKE FELT IN ROME

CHIETA, Italy, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—At least two persons were killed and 30 injured today in an earthquake which terrorized inhabitants of the Abruzzi and Merchegieno mountainous regions, scenes of many previous quakes.

The deaths occurred in the little towns of Lana and Peligne, near here and not far from the Adriatic Sea. Most of the injured live in the city of Sulmona, among the mountains.

The little towns in this region suffered mostly because of badly built houses.

The quake was felt also in Rome and Naples, and the inhabitants of dozens of towns between the two cities were thrown into a panic.

A number of houses crashed at Sulmona and a preliminary estimate put the number of injured at 20 or 30, some of whom were seriously hurt by falling objects.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Nightly earthquakes, followed by thunderous roars and booming explosions, were reported yesterday by a party of big game hunters returning by airplane from Post River Lake, 175 miles northwest of Anchorage.

Roosevelt Sends Sympathy to Mexico

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—President Roosevelt today sent a message of sympathy to the President of Mexico and the Mexican people on the disastrous hurricane which devastated the Tampico district.

Chairman John Barton Payne, of the American Red Cross, telegraphed offering assistance to the Mexican Red Cross.

Americans Reported Safe in Storm Zone

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—All Americans in the hurricane stricken zone about Tampico, Mexico, are believed safe, Vice Consul R. S. Carey advised the State Department today. A brief message from Carey stated:

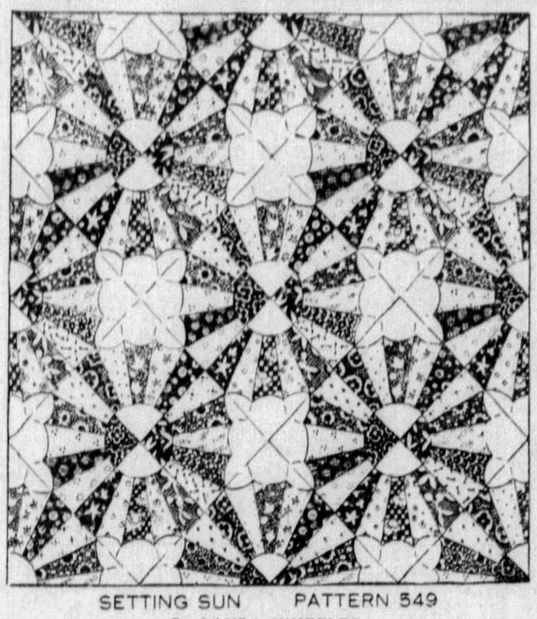
'Holiday' Leaders To Meet Labor Chief

CLEVELAND, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, said today Milo Reno and other farm holiday leaders had asked him to confer with them here this week.

He was informed, he said, that the group left Des Moines last night and would arrive either late today or tomorrow but had no information on what they would discuss.

STRIKING SCRAP QUILT



SETTING SUN PATTERN 549

By LAURA WHEELER

The old-time quiltmaker, whose day often started with the rising sun was so taken with the beauty of the sunrise and sunset, that she was inspired to capture it in her quilts. There are many Rising Sun and Setting Sun patterns, but probably the loveliest is this Setting Sun. Here is not only the sun in all its glory, but the tiny clouds that so often accompany the sunset, are also scattered throughout the quilt. The rays of the sun can be done in scraps, as shown here, or the dark patches can all be done in one material and the light, figured ones in a second one.

Pattern 549 comes to you with complete, simple, instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10c for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth Avenue, New York City.

BLUE LAW VOTE IN PA. CERTAIN

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Sept. 26.—If an injunction is granted in Huntingdon County Court restraining commissioners from placing the Sunday sports question on the November ballots, it will have no bearing on elections in other sections of the state, Attorney General William A. Schnader said today.

Schnader declined to discuss further the suit started in Huntingdon County to test the constitutionality of the Sunday sports law. The act, signed by Gov. Pinchot last April, would permit baseball and football on the Sabbath in Pennsylvania municipalities which vote approval.

Judge Thomas F. Bailey has set no date for a hearing on the injunction suit. If restraint is desired by other municipalities, voters must go before the local courts. The law makes it mandatory that all municipalities submit the Sunday sports question to the voters on November 7.

PAGE CARRIES 'HAPPY DAYS' MESSAGE

"Buttons," the Sun-Telegraph page boy, is reflecting the popular song "Happy Days Are Here Again," because he is bringing real joy wherever he makes a call. "Buttons" is distributing $15 every day to readers of the Sun-Telegraph—personally delivering the cash to the persons "paged" each day in this newspaper.

"Buttons"

"Buttons" is a representative of the Sun-Telegraph in one feature of the drive to speed spending and business recovery. To assist in this campaign the Sun-Telegraph selects the names of 11 readers every day and these names appear day by day on the Want Ad pages. If you see your name in this list it means that you have been "paged." One of these readers will get an award of $5 and the other 10 get $1 each. "Buttons" will call on you with the money.

This gives at least 11 persons an opportunity to participate in the "Buy in September and Save" campaign and it will not cost them anything because the Sun-Telegraph furnishes the money.

If you haven't been "paged" watch the Sun-Telegraph for your name. It may be in the list today—it may be printed tomorrow. You can't tell whether you are going to be one of the fortunate unless you read the Want Ad pages of the Sun-Telegraph every day.

PEIPING FEARS JAP ZERO HOUR

PEIPING, China, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Three Japanese bombing planes, carrying machine guns and having full bomb racks, flew at an altitude of less than 200 feet over the Peiping Legation quarter today.

The flight, apparently for reconnaissance purposes, caused apprehension among residents because of events that might result with the expiration at midnight of a Japanese ultimatum to Gen. Fang Chen-Wu that he withdraw from the North China demilitarized zone.

TOKIO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—A war office spokesman denied today that the Japanese Army intended to advance beyond the southern limits of the North China demilitarized zone.

In an interview with the Associated Press he declared the Japanese hope a "mere demonstration" will be sufficient to disperse a guerilla concentration at Hwaiju, northeast of Peiping.

FORD WORKERS STRIKE IN PA.

Workers said it was not a unionized movement but was the spontaneous action of the employes. They estimated 4,000 to 5,000 men left their places.

The walkout was orderly and hundreds of the men remained in the vicinity of the plant. They said their working time was reduced last Friday from five to four days with a minimum wage rate of 50 cents an hour for an eight hour day, or $16 a week. Some of the men asserted this was not a living wage. They declared they want a five-day week at five dollars a day.

One representative from each of the departments will form a committee to confer with company officials, leaders among the men said.

COUNCIL MOVES FOR LOAN TO MEET COSTS

In a special meeting tomorrow Council will act finally on an ordinance authorizing the city to borrow a sum not in excess of $750,000 to meet immediate demands.

Council's finance committee, composed of all members of Council, approved the measure yesterday. It provides that the money be borrowed on short term notes bearing four and a half per cent interest yearly.

The notes, under the provisions of the ordinance, must be retired before the end of 1933. Money to pay them off will be taken from a special fund which will receive all receipts during the remainder of the year from all sources not needed for sinking funds, interest and tax charges.

Controller James P. Kerr told Council yesterday that the city should receive by November 1 sufficient funds to meet the notes, provided tax collections do not fall off greatly.

The city's financial condition is good, he said, and the loan is necessary only because taxpayers are not paying as promptly as estimated.

Councilman W. Y. English, chairman of the finance committee, pointed out that the city's finances would be even better if $1,500,000 of its funds were not "tied up in closed banks."

RELIEF BONDS UP MONDAY

City Council will vote next Monday on an ordinance providing for sale of $300,000 of bonds to be used for work relief.

The ordinance, approved yesterday by Council's finance committee, provides the money be used for engineering expenses, labor and materials on public works.

The $300,000 in bonds will be taken from the $2,000,000 relief bond issue voted in 1932. Previously $300,000 has been taken from the issue.

CLEANTHRU DRY CLEANERS

Concerning Interruption of Our Service by Strikers from Other Plants

We regret exceedingly the inconvenience to our customers caused by the interruption of service due to activities of striking employes from other Plants. We are grateful for your patience and ask your further indulgence until matters are finally adjusted.

In explanation we want to state: There is no strike at our Plants. We are operating under the N. R. A. Code. Our employes are satisfied and want to work. They are not members of the striking Union, nor are we affiliated in any way with the Cleaners Association against which the strike was called.

We closed our plants to avoid injury by strikers to our employes for their refusal to join the Union, and to prevent damage to our own and customers' property as threatened by strikers. Our employes have been intimidated going to and from work, and our delivery trucks ordered from the streets by threats of violence.

We have always paid a living wage. Our sympathies are with underpaid workers. This attitude toward workers should have the approval of strikers. It should act as a stimulant to their efforts to gain a living wage, rather than their unjust antagonism toward us.

We have taken steps to restore our complete service at the earliest possible moment. Watch for announcement in daily papers.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

People Must Earn Things They Want From Life

You "want life"—its thrills, adventures, rewards? Of course!

Then why aren't you getting them?

Is it because Fate has loaded the dice against you? Or is there perhaps another reason?

Listen—and maybe you'll learn. For here's a little girl who wants life, too. But—

My Dear Miss Robinson:

I am 18 years old. A lovely, inspiring age, you'll say. I was graduated from Hi at 16. "My!" I hear you say, "you must be smart!" But, no; I'm not. I was pushed, because I was the teacher's pet—the professor's favorite—and at 17 I set out in a small town to conquer the world. Not literally, you understand, but in my day dreams.

I wanted to go to college. It was the fondest of all my dreams. Clothes, room, board, books, sports—I didn't go. I wouldn't go, because I couldn't have everything that I wanted—lovely clothes, so dear to every girl's heart; room and board in a lovely, quiet private home; books, two sets, one to leave at home and the other at college; sports. I loved them. Of course, I might have worked my way through, but I was too proud.

Yet—was it pride? Other boys and girls have worked; worn cast-off clothes; kept house in basement rooms and used borrowed books—and appreciated their education when they got it!

Not enough spunk and get-up about me to work for the thing I wanted worse than anything else in the world! I didn't want the education. I wanted the glamour and loveliness and fun that is associated with college life.

WOULD BE INDEPENDENT

And now? I'm still sitting at home. Doing the simple tasks of home, and about to "bust" with indignation when I hear people say: "Isn't it just too sweet of her; staying at home, helping the sweetest, most gentle soul in the world!"—and playing tennis, attending Sunday school, entertaining girl friends and being entertained, when I want to jump up and down and scream!

I want to get away from it all—try my wings; be independent. I want to live! And I'm just sitting, letting the world roll calmly on, longing, yearning to be with it, and roll with it, and share its heartaches and trouble and sham and loveliness.

Yet, I don't dare! I don't dare, because I'm not secure. I'm afraid. Not of kidnapers or storms or street cars—afraid of my own silly soul! I didn't dare to risk having my pride hurt by working my way through college. Dare I try my wings in the world now?

Eighteen—a mere child! Yet I am old. Old in a way—I've tasted love and hate, and been disappointed and snubbed by fair-weather friends—and I've analyzed my soul!

One of the Children of 1933.

SHOULD GET BUSY

Yes, you've analyzed your soul, youngster. But your analysis didn't go quite far enough. For why are you spilling all this uncomplimentary dirt about yourself? Is it because you're really, truly ashamed of your laziness—truly sorry for your silliness? No it isn't.

It's because you like to show off; and this "confession" business is just one more way of hogging the spotlight.

Self-blame can be, and often is, as cowardly and conceited an act as blaming the other fellow—just as slick a dodge for postponing real action.

If you were truly sorry that you've short-changed yourself, you wouldn't be talking about it. You'd be getting busy. And that is exactly what I'd advise you to do—right now!

You'd like to have life? Then go after it! Not because you'll ever be able to float on it, safe and comfortable—but because it is the greatest adventure on earth.

But remember this, youngster—you'll never be able to start on the top of the heap. If you want life to give you things, you'll have to earn them. So far, you haven't been willing to. Because they weren't handed to you on a silver platter, you refused to play.

Have you the courage to play now? And for higher stakes than pretty what-nots?

You have? Then prove it!

Celebrity's Wife Has Ephemeral Glory, Declares Fay King

By FAY KING

No wife has a more interesting life than the wife of a celebrity—while it lasts.

But surely no ex-wife is so completely obliviated when the celebrity marries again.

It is not unusual to find a former wife completely omitted from a short biography of a famous man.

With a celebrity, only the current wife counts. For the public is interested only in his wife because she interests him, and while his interest lasts.

Such wives sometimes forget that the attention and distinction they enjoy is only reflected glory. But they are painfully aware of this when they no longer share it.

Stranger Follows Avis Arlen Abroad Train

I do not think that I have ever been compelled to think more quickly than when Hugh told me of the man whom he suspected of being Phil Veritzen's spy upon the movements of Avis Arlen.

"Do you want me to warn her?" Hugh had asked. "What shall I say to her?"

"Tell her the man is spying upon her," I said, "and warn her not to deny meeting me here in Patchogue. If Mr. Veritzen questions her about it, she will have to think up some plausible excuse for coming out here to see me. Tell her to telephone me as soon as she has an opportunity. I will not talk to Philip Veritzen in the meantime, even if he calls on the telephone, so that we will have to chance to check the explanation."

"I get you," Hugh said, "and there go the man and the train. I shall have to sprint."

"Get off at Sayville," I called after him. "I'll meet you."

He was running now, magnificently, effortless, and he threw up his hand with a gesture of comprehension reminiscently familiar to me. I had seen it frequently in our days of service together during the World War.

He was only just in time. He swung himself upon the platform of the last car as lightly as if he had been a stripling of 18, instead of a war veteran.

MEETS HUGH

Both Avis Arlen and the man following her were already in the cars, and as the train pulled out with no sign of Hugh getting off, I turned my car around and started for Sayville.

The road between Sayville and Patchogue is marvellous, and I found little traffic. I was able, therefore, to reach the Sayville station within only a few minutes of Hugh's arrival.

"Your little friend, Miss Arlen, is a bit difficult of comprehension," he said.

"I learned that quite a while ago," I told him. "But just what has led you to that conclusion at this time?"

"Her behavior when I warned her of my belief that the ferret-faced man was a spy of Philip Veritzen.

"'Oh, but I am sure you are mistaken,' she said to me. 'You have no idea how many men I am constantly meeting who act in that peculiar manner. I don't know what there is about me'—here she simpered with an affectation of modesty—'but I have the most peculiar effect upon men! I am sure it is not my fault. I never go out of my way to attract them, but they are always making my life miserable with their attentions.'

AVIS CONFIDENT

"She was so smug and self-satisfied in her belief that I was tempted to say nothing more. But, instead, I courted the fate of all meddlers by reminding her that the man had alighted from the eastbound train and loitered upon the platform during the short interval before the coming of the westbound train, and then had boarded that train with no plausible excuse for doing so.

"I told her that men usually don't come to a town on one train and return within half an hour on another, spending all the time in between upon the station platform, speaking to no one except to ask for a match.

"'I've known several men to do exactly that,' she said stubbornly.

"'Nevertheless,' I said, 'I must repeat the message Mrs. Graham gave to me for you.'"

He stopped, and breathlessly I put a question.

"What did she say to that?"

"She said very sweetly that she would be very glad to listen to anything you had said. I therefore repeated your message almost word for word. She listened courteously enough, but managed to register complete disbelief in your deduction. However, she pumped up enough deference to promise that she would heed your caution regarding Mr. Veritzen. Then she looked at me with what she evidently would have defined as a distinctly coy glance.

"'But don't either of you worry,' she said. 'If he really is a spy, I'll find it out before we get to New York, and you may be sure he won't tell Mr. Veritzen he has seen me, and he won't do or say a single thing to harm me. I've handled men like him before many times. They are just like clay in my hands. So tell Mrs. Graham not to worry one bit!'"

Household Hints

If a pinch of borax is added to the water in which lettuce is soaking it will make it crisp and fresh.

If you have trouble cleaning your strainer and find it clogged with tomatoes, cheese, or whatever you have been straining, wash it with a stiff kitchen brush under very hot water.

Fruit pies are often spoiled through the juice boiling up over the pastry, making it sodden and heavy. To obviate this cut a drinking straw in four and place these in the pie to form "chimneys." This will keep the pastry dry and prevent its sagging.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

At a Restaurant

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been troubled by a problem of etiquette for some time and no amount of discussion with my friends wholly satisfies me. Here it is:

When a young man dines with a young lady at one of the popular "dinner and dance" cafes, how is the ordering of the meal accomplished? Does the gentleman receive from the lady her order and then transmit it along with his to the waiter, or should each of the diners give his and her own order to the waiter? Frank

The first is the correct way of doing . . . the lady gives her order to the man, her host, and he relays both orders to the waiter. If the orders differ, he takes special care to give the woman's order first.

Note of Sympathy

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I worked in a small office for two people as their stenographer. Last week I heard that one of the men I used to work for lost his wife. Would it be proper for me to send him a letter of sympathy, or a sympathy card? This man always treated me very fairly, and was always willing to do a favor for me. If it is correct to send this letter, would you be kind enough to send me a copy of such a letter? B.

You may, if you wish, mail this man your visiting card with "Deepest sympathy" written on it. Or, if you prefer, you might write him a note worded like this:

Dear Mr. Simpson:

May I offer you my deepest sympathy in this sorrow that I have just heard has come to you? Although I never had the privilege of knowing Mrs. Simpson, I know what a happy marriage was yours and hers, and I realize what this separation must mean to you.

Most sincerely yours,

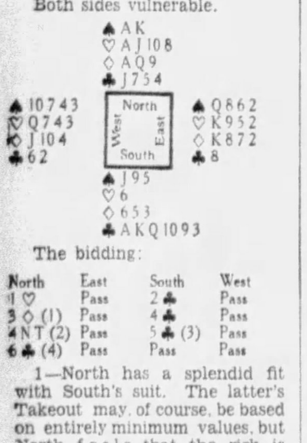
Assuring a Contract

Elimination plays and strip and forced lead plays all have much in common, although they are not identical, as some players think. The stripping of an adverse hand is designed to force a favorable lead; the elimination of a suit or suits from the open or closed hand has the same purpose behind it—namely, to put an adversary in the lead and then compel him to make a play that will give you a trick not otherwise attainable. A good Bridge player must understand both of these tricks of the trade if he is to be assured of making contracts which depend on something more than cashing Aces and Kings and running established low cards. I venture the opinion that more close contracts are lost by failures to appreciate and apply these principles than by any other of the offenses of the average bridge player.

An interesting example of the correct application of the principle of elimination occurred in a hand played recently by Mrs. Frank E. Bright, of Detroit, in a duplicate game at Ottawa, Canada.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ◇ (1)	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 NT (2)	Pass	5 ♣ (3)	Pass
6 ♣ (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—North has a splendid fit with South's suit. The latter's Takeout may, of course, be based on entirely minimum values, but North feels that the risk is worth running and so forces a further bid from South by the bid of a three-card suit.

2—In this case showing three Aces.

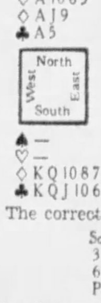
4—North is unwilling to play the hand at less than six.

West's Opening lead was a heart. As a matter of fact, there is not much choice of a suit to lead with his holding. This trick was won in Dummy with the Ace and a heart returned and immediately ruffed in the closed hand. Dummy was re-entered by leading a spade and another heart led and ruffled. The remaining high spade in Dummy permitted the lead of North's last heart, which the Declarer ruffed. Hearts were now eliminated from the Dummy. South then completed the process of eliminating spades from both the open and closed hands by leading the spade Knave, which was ruffed in Dummy. All that was now needed to practically assure the contract was to find the adversely held trumps divided 2-1. When they were found to be so divided by two leads of trumps, Mrs. Bright led the diamond three from her own hand, and, when West played the four, played the nine from the Dummy. East won with the King but could find no play to prevent the making of the Slam contract.

Today's Question

What is the correct bidding of the following hands, not vulnerable?



Answer: The correct bidding is:

North	South
1 NT	3 ◇
3 NT	6 ♣
7 ◇	Pass

A freak of this kind is very difficult to bid. However, North knows that if his partner can bid six clubs all by himself over a non-vunerable one-notrump bid, the three Aces are bound to be of material assistance. There is a slight danger of South's holding a singleton spade, but information regarding this point can never be obtained and so the best policy is to gamble the hand out.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Pouches under the eyes show up on off days when a woman is tired or when there is some digestive upset. Sometimes water will cure them, six or eight glasses a day. Few women drink as much water as the body needs for health and well-being. More sunshine, more fresh air, longer hours of sleep are the doctor's orders. Local treatment consists of bathing fir[illegible] water, then with cold, placing over the eyes pads of gauze that have been dipped in witch hazel. Slapping on cold cream at bedtime helps; massage urges tissues and blood streams to function more actively.

Staggering sums are spent each year for cosmetics. Women who howl about the heavy overhead of the home beautifying business can cut down costs easily enough. No need of slathering a thick layer of cream onto the complexion. A thin film will serve as well. Anyhow, the friction is the important part of the treatment. A little bit of cream well rubbed in does more good than a lot that is merely smoothed onto the epidermis. It's the woman who is stingy with powder that gets the loveliest results; too much gives the marshmallow effect, especially when it is slapped upon the impertinent nose.

41,000 SCHOO' PUPILS WILL STUDY NRA

Forty-one thousand students i Pittsburgh's public secondar schools, from the seventh to th twelfth grades, will study th NRA in a special social scien course announced by Dr. Ben C Graham, superintendent o schools.

Starting Thursday or Friday, every high and trade school in the city will incorporate an intensive analysis of the problems presented by the recovery program and its effect on their daily lives. The course will require from five to 10 days to complete and will be augmented by school assemblies to be addressed by speakers from the local NRA committee, Dr. Graham explained.

BUYING EMPHASIZED

A phamplet, forming the foundation for the studies, recognizes the importance of the buying movement, which has been sponsored in Pittsburgh by the Sun-Telegraph, to insure the success of NRA. It states:

"One objective is to recognize the good intentions of those employers who have freely, and perhaps at a sacrifice, accepted the NRA and done their best to co-operate with it. Another necessary point to consider is the fact that unless employers do get more business than they have been receiving many of them will not be able to continue the program indefinitely.

"One of the causes of the depression was a slacking up of buying by people in general, some of whom could readily afford to keep on spendinng as before."

STUDY IMPORTANT

Dr. Graham is convinced that the NRA study is "the most important work we can do right now in the social science studies." He pointed out that:

"It will make our social sciences live. It will help discussions of the NRA movement in the homes of the students and it is something that everyone is interested in."

In Dr. Graham's opinion, there is a steady trend toward incorporating more and more of such timely problems in the school's curriculum. Pittsburgh's schools already have adopted this practice by organizing special studies of banks and money.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Patrolman Williams likes to give advice to the obese on how to reduce. So when he saw a man with a protuberance at the waistline, he stopped him to give him a little speech about wrong vitamins or something.

But it wasn't fat. It was a rope and a revolver, and the man, William Tornoff, was arrested. The patrolman accused him of planning a burglary.

SLEUTH HERE AIDS OHIO ROBBERY SUSPECT WITH ALIBI

POISON DEATH RETRIAL MOVE ARGUED

Signs of Scheme to Kill Family Seen By Justice Drew

Efforts to have the State Supreme Court of Pennsylvania grant new trials to Mrs. Anna Allas, 30, and Mrs. Mary Chalfa, 32, of Munhall, serving life sentences for murder, brought a retort yesterday from Justice James B. Drew, who declared:

"It looks as though there was a scheme to poison the entire family and collect the insurance."

The two women, convicted of poisoning Stephen Allas, 12, were sentenced to prison for life.

TRIAL ERROR CHARGED

Louis Little, counsel for the women, offered the new trial motion late yesterday. It was to be followed today by the opposing argument of Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty.

Little argued that the trial judge erred in permitting evidence to be introduced concerning the death of other victims. He also complained that permission was refused to have the bodies exhumed for examination, but Justice William B. Linn remarked this should have been demanded before or during the trial.

The women were convicted only for the death of Steve Allas, but it was brought out at the trial that Andrew Allas, 15, and a baby, Richard Duyava, also had died. All were insured and the money collected.

VERONA CASE HEARD

The court also heard argument on the appeal of Mike Mamulo and Matt Hadok, indicted jointly for the murder of Charles McFarland, at Verona, December 5, 1931.

Mamulo was convicted April 20, 1932 of voluntary manslaughter and a new trial refused, from which decision an appeal was taken. Mamulo was sentenced to the Western Penitentiary for not less than six years and not more than 12.

Hadok, convicted of murder in the first degree, was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. His appeal was based on the refusal of the court to withdraw a juror, because of an alleged prejudical remark by the juror.

HOME BOND BAR LIFTED BY U. S.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. — Aimed at increasing the liquidity of closed national banks, Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor has authorized receivers of national banks to exchange mortgage holdings for Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds.

This will enable the closed national banks to obtain loans at the R. F. C. on the security of Home Loan bonds which are eligible collateral at the rate of 75 per cent of the face value.

O'Connor had ruled late in August that pending further developments it would not be advisable for the Home Loan bonds to be exchanged by receivers for mortgages held by them.

In a letter to Chairman William F. Stevenson, of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, O'Connor said in part:

"We have decided to send instructions to all receivers authorizing them to submit for consideration of this office all cases in which they believe it would be to the advantage of their trusts to exchange mortgage assets for Home Loan bonds."

Now for a Happy Reunion--Banker And Borrower

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Next thing is to loosen up credit. Introduce the forgetting borrower to the remembering banker.

Bring back those cordial days when the banker said:

"Will you take this money for 30 days? Or would you rather worry 60?"

The small borrower replied:

"Make it 90 and both o' us will get wrinkles."

It's all government money now and we see no reason why it shouldn't be distributed like paper plates at a barbecue.

But the banker cannot get over his cautious mannerisms. Meet him in July and he is still sifting last winter's cinders.

Credit should be as loose as a camel's neck. When we get that motorcycle escort we will do 60 on the upgrade.

Poor Teacher! Here Are Five Sets of Twins and All in One School Room!

DONALD AND KENNETH YOUNG, 6

The five sets of twins who reported for the first and second grades—all in one room—at Clifton School. They're 10 out of 40 pupils in the room. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

FIVE SETS TWINS IN ONE ROOM

And all 10 children, enrolled in Miss Sara Lesnett's primary class. There are 40 children in the room.

Miss Lesnett says:

"All the twins are wonderful children. I sit them right across the aisle from each other because I think twins do better together. Oh, now and then, I have to stop and think to tell them apart, but I haven't had them very long and I'll learn how soon. The most twins this school with 140 children has ever had before is one set, and now this year we seem to be making up for lost time with five!"

All the twins are 6 years old except two—they're 5.

M'CLURE DENIED TRIAL DELAY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Charges that he would not receive a fair trial because of remarks made by Gov. Pinchot failed to win a delay for State Senator John J. McClure, who, with 95 other Delaware County residents, is charged with conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

Federal Judge George A. Welsh yesterday turned thumbs down on a petition filed by attorneys for the defendants asking a continuance. The court for the third time ruled all must go to trial tomorrow, two similar petitions asking delay having been rejected recently.

Former Judge James Gay Gordon, Sr., counsel for McClure, charged Gov. Pinchot in a speech before textile workers in Philadelphia on September 14 "sought to bring McClure into ignominy and contempt and promote prejudice against him."

Gordon accused Pinchot of "bringing politics into this case" and said he would demand that a jury panel be drawn from a jurisdiction "that has not been exhorted by the Governor."

MAN CONFESSES FATAL STABBING

Zellous Woods, 36, Negro, of 1536 Webster avenue, confessed early today, according to police, that he had fatally stabbed Edward McNamara, 22, in front of his home at 1910 Webster avenue, Sunday. In company of detectives, Woods went to his home, where the knife was found hidden behind a piano.

The trouble which led to the stabbing, according to police, was resentment over an insult, alleged to have been passed by a group of Negroes at McNamara and a number of friends. McNamara was a cousin of Lieut. of Police John A. Joyce, of the North Side.

Woods was arrested by Police Capt. Harry Shunk early Monday after he is alleged to have boasted in a Negro cabaret that he had "cut a man."

PITTSBURGHER GETS CHAIR

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Albera Bruno, 27-year-old Pittsburgh barber, was found guilty of murder in the first degree without a recommendation of mercy yesterday in the slaying of John J. McLaughlin, Park Lane hotel night clerk.

The verdict carries a sentence of death in the electric chair.

The jury of seven women and five men shattered all local records in reaching a verdict in a first degree murder trial, according to courthouse attaches, by deliberating only 1 hour and 15 minutes.

The jury was divided as to the mercy recommendation, it was learned, and required approximately four ballots before an unanimous verdict.

Attorneys for Bruno immediately signified intention of filing a motion for a new trial.

Frank Vacchiano, of Dayton, several weeks ago was given a similar verdict in the murder of McLaughlin and is under sentence of death in the electric chair October 9.

AVERBACH GOES TO CLEVELAND TO TESTIFY

Tells Court He Saw 'Giggsy' Zeck at Time of Holdup

Precinct Detective Nathan Averbach today had done his bit to help Benny (Giggsy) Zeck, First Ward-heeler, "beat the rap" in Cleveland, O.

Averbach, who is also of the First Ward, went over to Cleveland, took the witness chair and gave Giggsy an alibi. He testified that he was talking with Giggsy in Pittsburgh about the time that Zeck is accused of beating up a Cleveland gasoline station attendant and robbing him of $300.

On cross-examination Averbach admitted having obtained Zeck's release on bond after Zeck had been arrested in Pittsburgh for the Cleveland job. Averbach said the "Pittsburgh detective inspector" had instructed him to release Zeck on personal bond after the inspector had talked with "Mr. Maloney, First Ward chairman in Pittsburgh."

Frank R. Boyd is inspector of detectives and A. M. Maloney is chairman of the First Ward.

Zeck has admitted he was a bootlegger. He has been arrested in the Pittsburgh district five times on charges ranging from robbery and hijacking to assault and battery, but in each instance was acquitted.

PEABODY HIGH BOY BUILDS MODEL HOUSE

Miniature Dwelling Complete to Rock Garden, Curtains

A model house, in perfect scale, complete even to the lace curtains at the windows and the miniature rock garden on its front terrace, will be one of the exhibits from Peabody High School, at the Industrial Arts and Trade School Exhibit, Carnegie Museum, beginning Saturday.

The builder is Byron J. Lorentz, post graduate student at Peabody. Following his completion of architectural drawing courses, Lorentz was given the problem of designing a model house to fit a queerly-shaped South Hills lot.

He drew his scale drawings and blue prints and, using them as patterns, cut the walls of the house out of poster cardboard.

Today Peabody High School classmates are getting a preview of the completed work. The house, of a modernistic, yet practical style of architecture, stands on a slight hillside, with the grounds about it beautifully landscaped with trees and shrubbery. Tiny porch furniture stands on the porch overlooking a 15-mile vista, a miniature lamp-post lights the drive to the garage under the house.

Altogether, the house is charming enough to delight the heart of a little girl wishing for the perfect doll house!

As his instructor, Charles E. Lawrence, says:

"Lorentz is one of the most talented boys we have ever had at Peabody. That model house is practical in every detail, and could be really built from the plans just as it looks in miniature."

CHAPTER XVII.

"Well, I hope you haven't got a dictaphone by you, or maybe somebody listening in. I shoot off my yap too much. I forget that while I'm your pal you're just my lawyer. You know how these things are. The word slips around, but nobody knows. But if you hadn't got the word, what makes you interested in Murtoch?"

"Never mind that. I want to get into his apartment, and I want to do it the first possible chance."

"It's a million to one that lad has 17 witnesses that he's been asleep in bed all morning," chuckled Gazotti. "And he'll stay there all day to make his alibi look better. So I don't know when the place will be free for you to go there.

"Well, it might be that among my friends there's someone with an outfit of master keys," laughed Tony. "They'll be up in an hour. And the minute Murtoch's apartment is empty you'll get the word. And there'll be a couple of boys hanging around to see you don't get the worst of whatever turns up."

"Thanks, Tony. Something else. I ran into Crelliman in Miss Waxted's apartment. He offered me plenty to drop the case. I struck him. I think I can look for action from him pretty quickly. Now, I can take care of myself, but I'd like to feel certain that when I leave this apartment Miss Waxted is going to be safe."

"It'll take the army to do her any harm," promised Tony. "Has she moved in with you permanently?"

Synopsis

Jackson Durant, young lawyer, has alienated his society friends and lost his fiancee, Sue Leonard, because of his success as the "mouthpiece" who won the acquittal of the notorious Tony Gazotti. Miss Leonard then becomes engaged to Tom Siddall, youthful broker. Shortly afterwards Siddall is arrested, charged with the murder of Mimi Montagne, who was shot dead on the terrace of a penthouse owned by Jim Crelliman. Sue begs Durant to get busy in Siddall's behalf. Durant believes the broker is innocent and secures the aid of Gazotti, who introduces him to Gertie Waxted, closest friend of the murdered entertainer. The lawyer takes Gertie to his apartment for questioning. She agrees to help Siddall's defense. Durant borrows her ring and visits the pawnshop of Levitoff, pawnbroker, who told police he sold a gun to Siddall. Shortly afterwards Levitoff is found shot to death. Durant suspects Crelliman. Later Durant is threatened by Crelliman and Gertie is worried.

Now Go On

Gertie Satisfied

Public Enemy Number One giggled like a child. "Gosh, that's a swell way of telling me I got a dirty mind. Okay, Mr. Durant, you'll get the keys in an hour and you'll hear from me as soon as it's safe for you to go to Murtoch's place. Gee, I wish I knew what was in your mind."

"So do I, Tony," said Durant.

"You make me feel like Helen of Troy, or some other historical dame that nations were battling over," said Gertie, as Durant hung up.

"Not one of them was more worth a war than you, Gertie," smiled Durant.

"If you'd act that way instead of talking it, I'd be easier convinced," said the girl. "What do we do now?"

"We just wait around," said Durant. "In fact, Gertie, you may wait around here for weeks."

"The captive loves her silken chains," smiled Gertie. "But if you'll get out of this room and let a lady shed your pajamas, the lady promises to knock you dead with a suit of her own."

"The gentleman announces he's practically moribund already," he told her.

He walked out into the living room, and in five minutes Gertie joined him. The red pajamas she wore accentuated daringly her brunette beauty. Durant felt his pulses leap as she sat

SHRYOCK ART ON DISPLAY

By PENELOPE REDD

An exhibition of paintings in oil and water color by Miss Lucy Shryock is on view at Webster Hall through Wednesday, both day and evening. Miss Shryock has exhibited annually for many years with the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh. She is about to retire from her post as an art supervisor to live in Cumberland, Md.

Miss Redd

Miss Shryoch, one of the first supervisors of art in the city, was originally in charge of the schools in the Highland district. Her painting, of necessity, has been entirely an avocation. During summer holidays in New England, she has done marines at Boothbay Harbor and the fishing boats at Provincetown. During week ends in Pittsburgh, she painted such landscapes as the hills from the Blooming Valley and the river studies from Elizabeth Robb's house at Emsworth.

Miss Shryock's still life paintings are colorful arrangements of piquant objects. Pottery and textiles and decorative objects are combined with excellent taste.

One of her best paintings is of the contrast of the shadowed interior of a tool shed with the white door swung wide open with a riotous swag of trumpet flowers.

IT TAKES HEALTHY NERVES TO BE A STEEPLEJACK

HIGH UP, SEVENTY STORIES above the street, where the slightest slip means certain death—here, if ever, nerves must be healthy. Listen to James J. Dwyer, famous steeplejack shown in these two pictures, "Worry? Not me. Of course I'm a smoker—and I smoke a lot. But I smoke Camels and my nerves are OK."

HOW ARE YOUR NERVES? Does it upset you to see someone in a dangerous position? Put yourself in that place—then consider your nerves. But remember, no matter how many you smoke, Camel's costlier tobaccos never upset your nerves.

A MATCHLESS BLEND

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

NOT MANY OF US have the iron nerves necessary to be a New York steeplejack. But we can all take a tip from these dare-devils whose very lives depend on healthy nerves.

As James J. Dwyer tells it: "I've been climbing for years and smoking cigarettes even longer. I picked Camels because they're milder. And when I say milder I mean that no matter how many I smoke they never get on my nerves. What do I think about up there in the air? Not much of anything. Worry? Not me, I smoke Camels—and my nerves are OK."

You'll like Camels, too. Their costlier tobaccos certainly make a difference. In taste. In mildness. And they never get on your nerves.

30 VOTE BOARDS TO EXPLAIN RETURNS

Ten election boards are appearing today before the returning board, which, at the end of its third day, had counted only nine districts of the total of 941 in the county.

At least 20 more boards will appear on succeeding days.

County Commissioners, sitting in yesterday, signed the 30 summons for the boards, or in a few cases minority inspectors, to appear and explain conflicting tabulations on their return sheets.

So far, no fraud has been charged. Maj. William T. Rees, head of the Elections Bureau, explained that 30 of the first 40 sheets were found to be incomplete, or conflicting, and the boards are being called on to explain the discrepancies.

SNAIL-LIKE PACE!

The snail-like pace so far will necessitate night sessions beginning tomorrow night, Rees said. He added that he would like to have the complete count certified by October 3, but unless the confusion abates, it will not be finished until the tenth. The Sheriff must have the certified lists by October 24.

The delay so far has been caused for the most part, Rees said, by boards failing to keep separate the ballot and the vote machine count. In some few cases, due to the confusion at the polls, boards failed to remove the ballot stubs, and accordingly their returns showed a stub shortage. He feels that the work will be speeded up within a few days.

TWO COUNTS AGREE

While not yet certified, the councilmanic fight in the city showed a close parallel between the unofficial vote election night and the official count yesterday. The unofficial was somewhat lower, due to incomplete districts. Of five districts counted yesterday, four tallied perfectly with the unofficial, and the fifth tallied as to the ballot count, the vote machine totals being missing on election night.

The count yesterday, including five districts of the Fifteenth Ward, shows:

District.	Magee	English.	Duggan.	Little.	Oliver.	Connelley.
6	154	192	224	202	185	195
8	127	102	103	106	86	93
10	178	197	167	195	184	198
11	142	168	153	156	141	144

McNair Probe Blocked By Registration Board

G. O. P. Interference Charged by Woman Vote Registrar

Cornelius D. Scully, campaign manager for William N. McNair, Democratic mayoralty candidate, appeared before the Registration Commission today to press his demand for a thorough purging of the voting lists and was told he would not be permitted to use that commission as a sling for political hot shot.

Scully demanded assurance that the commission would clean up the lists before November.

John K. Morrow, commission secretary, said if Scully knew of specific violations he should, as a citizen, submit them to the commission.

Morrow said the work of the commission was proceeding satisfactorily, but Mrs. Mary Jane Clarke, Democratic member, dissented.

She charged the commission had been interfered with by Republican organization attorneys, and that its work "could have been handled better."

In a rough and tumble battle on the floor of the bank, the confederate of the wounded robber beat two bank employes on the head with his revolver, then escaped. The wounded man also reached the street but was caught by a policeman.

Yellow Stone Park received four inches, and there were light falls in the higher elevations about the state.

M'NAIR PRAISES TAX SYSTEM

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Pittsburgh's two-tax system is held out to American cities as a plan that is practically politician-proof.

William N. McNair, Democratic candidate for Mayor in the Pennsylvania city, who praised the Pittsburgh tax scheme before the Henry George Foundation's conventoin, said:

"It's not that we save any more money than Chicago does. And our politicians throw it away just as fast as anyone. But our taxes are lower, and we can pay our policemen, firemen and teachers."

Only two taxes are levied, McNair explained—a tax on land and one on buildings.

No licenses are required for selling tobacco or beer, no tax is laid on driving a car, and the personal property tax is unknown.

Next year, said McNair, the tax on buildings—which was half as high as that on land—will probably be cut.

'Husband No. 2' Story Wins Divorce

Judge Thomas M. Marshall today granted a divorce to John E. Barker, 2307 Penn avenue, from Elsie J. Barker, of 912 Galveston avenue, married March 18 last at Wellsburg, W. Va.

Barker testified that while on their honeymoon his wife told him she had previously been married to a man named Aquardo and had not been divorced.

'GOLD COAST' HOTEL SOLD

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The Drake Hotel, along Chicago's "gold coast" was sold in a transaction that involved a cash exchange of only $10,000, and today the purchaser, the Drake Management Company, was in control.

But, behind the deal was a tale of financial difficulties that led up to yesterday's bankruptcy sale by Federal Referee Garfield Charles. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York, holder of a lien amounting to almost $2,000,000 against the hotel was believed to be behind the management company.

As a result the sale price probably included only the name, good will and such physical property as was possessed by the Whitestone Management Corporation, operators of the hotel. The purchase price was subject to such other liens as may exist.

DRIVER SEIZED AFTER CRASH

An alleged hit-run driver was arrested last night a short time after his automobile had struck a huckster's wagon at the Liberty avenue end of the Bloomfield Bridge.

The driver, Steve Hlaic, 42, of 125 Second street, Blawnox, was identified through a license number furnished police by witnesses.

Ab Jenkins, Famous Racing Driver, Smashes Every Official World Mark From 200 to 3,000 Miles in a Pierce Arrow Special--Averages 117.8 Miles Per Hour For 24 Hours--Amoco-Gas Used Exclusively.

GET this picture! A stretch of salt bordering the Great Salt Lake in Utah . . . glaring white by day . . . shot with shadow by night . . . and a dare-devil in a Pierce Arrow Special ripping records to pieces. Hour after hour. Day and night.

That's the setting in which Ab Jenkins, famous racing pilot, broke every official A.A.A.* world record from 200 to 3,000 miles. His average for 3,000 miles was 117.8 miles per hour--amazing! For there were no banked turns. No concrete. Just salt!

A terrific test for man--motor--automobile --and fuel.

Ab Jenkins knew his motor and his fuel. Only AMOCO-GAS--the original special motor fuel--was used. So insistent was Jenkins that only AMOCO-GAS be used, that the American Oil Company shipped a supply all the way to Salduro, Utah.

(1) Greater and smoother power.

(2) More miles per gallon.

(3) A cool motor.

You'll always notice that when there's a big job to be done by a motor, AMOCO-GAS is chosen. And rightly! For it gives the greatest all-round performance--and the lowest cost per mile--of all motor fuels. In all cars--all makes--your own included. Convince yourself.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

The many folks standing about the Nixon last night, where the world premiere of Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" took place, to catch a glimpse of the famous playwright and to see the latest evening clothes being worn by Pittsburgh's "400" this season, were pretty much disappointed.

For Eugene O'Neill wasn't there, and as so often happens when Pittsburgh has a theatrical premiere, there was a notable social event which kept many a first nighter away. But even so, it was a sell out.

When the curtain rose on the first act, many of the smart set were still at the reception in Sewickley Heights following the Robinson-George wedding.

A group did tear itself away from the reception so as not to miss the premiere, but of course none of them was in evening clothes, having come from an afternoon wedding.

Attended Premiere

Mrs. Scaife wore a smart black crepe suit, with a brief, fitted jacket, a blouse of dark green, and a smart cape of silver-tipped fox. Her hat of black velvet was suggestive of the new adaptations of the beret.

Her sister-in-law, Mrs. James Verner Scaife, wore a cranberry red wool dress with a smart brown felt hat, and Louise Reed wore a copper-green rough crepe frock cut with a high neckline, and long, rather full sleeves. Genevieve Bell chose a rose wool crepe suit and a brown felt hat.

A purplish blue crepe dress having wide bands of fur at the elbow and a cape of the crepe bordered with the same fur was worn by Mrs. T. M. Jones, III, with a smart, small felt hat to match the dress. Mrs. May was in reddish brown wool with a jaunty, narrow brimmed brown felt hat.

Representing the younger set last night were Margret Brill, just back from a summer in Europe, and Katharine Frazer, also home from Europe. Margret wore a violet crepe satin gown and a wrap of deep apricot velvet, deeply fringed, and Katharine was in black lace with a short-sleeved jacket of black velvet having a scarf collar of white velvet crossed in front in stole fashion.

Younger Set There

A most interesting frock of faille in the new shade of green which is darker than chartreuse, but having yellow in it, was worn by Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby. The skirt was slit near the hem-line, and had a brief train. Talking with her was the Sewickley playwright, Mrs. Newton Chapin, in white brocaded satin having mink at the shoulders to suggest sleeves.

I saw Mrs. Felix Snowden there and the Samuel Harden Churches, with Mrs. Church in a figured crepe gown; Madeline McClintock in rose chiffon; Mrs. E. V. Babcock in jade green moire; Ruth Friday in white satin with mink for accent; the Reginald Macdonalds, with Mrs. Macdonald wearing flame crepe.

Frances Fitzgerald appeared regal in white lace with a brief white jacket. With her was her mother, Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald. Mrs. A. P. Brill was in black and so was Mrs. Jack Bissell. Still another favoring black with white for accent was Mrs. Sidney H. Binns who arrived with Mr. Binns.

Regal in White

Mrs. C. E. Lott was among the arrivals, as were Mrs. Robert Lee Wilson, in white lace with a black velvet wrap, Frances Johnston and her sister, Mrs. Davidson Herron.

A most interesting waist-length cape of sapphire blue velvet having a yoke and a upstanding collar of navy blue taffeta was worn by Mrs. John A. Murtland over a black chiffon dress.

I saw the Nelson Vance Harpers (she's the former Eleanor Rowe), Suzanne Trimble in black crepe with cream lace, the John W. Lawrences with Mrs. Lawrence in flowered chiffon; Mrs. Charles Flaccus in beige net; and Mrs. Earl Reed in red and white printed crepe, and Mrs. R. G. Fiscus in flowered georgette.

Gay Hues Favored

Mrs. William A. Duckham had a brief blue beaded jacket over a gown of pale hyacinth blue crepe; Mrs. A. S. F. Keister chose a bronze velvet gown having fur for accent; Mrs. George Wittmer III, arrived with Mrs. Walter E. Reineman, and Mrs. Homer Saint-Gaudens arrived with Mrs. Roy A. Hunt, in yellow chiffon made with a flared, double cape effect.

Gossipy Chat
By NANCY JANE

Even though Eugene O'Neill wasn't at the premier last night, his young ex-step-daughter, Barbara Cecil Burton, was. She's just enrolled in the drama department of Carnegie Tech, you know, and she came to see the play with Elmer Kenyon, head of the Tech drama school.

I overheard her say, "I'd heard that this play was different from anything O'Neill had written, but I didn't expect it to be like this."

She admired the acting of Elisha Cook, Jr., who was Richard, and who was in the Oscar Wilde admiration stage of adolesence.

Even if the rain did interfere with an out-of-door reception at the wedding of Mary Franklin Robinson and William D. George yesterday afternoon at Franklin Farms, the Sewickley Heights estate of the William Christopher Robinsons, it didn't with the marriage ceremony, which took place, as planned, in the beautiful garden.

Noticed many a man in evening clothes last night at the theater wearing a black raincoat as nonchalantly as women in the day time wear swagger coats.

We have some more to add about the first Pittsburgh directory, published in 1815 by James McKee Riddle, great-grandfather of Miss Evelyn Riddle, of Edgeworth.

I have a letter from Walter E. Stevenson, of "Rock Ledge," New Canaan, Conn., telling me that he has a copy of the 1815 edition in which the name of his great-grandfather, John Cooper, was listed. John Cooper was in the bookbinding business five to 10 years before the directory was published, by the way.

John Cooper's daughter, Helen Mar Cooper, married William S. Haven, who took over the business of his father-in-law, and published many books, among them Henry Breckenridge's "Whiskey Insurrection."

Their daughter, Helen Mar Haven, married William Stevenson, father of my correspondent, and the son-in-law again took over the business of his father-in law, with the name changed to Stevenson & Foster. The family is still in this business under the same name.

And when Horace Greeley made an address in Pittsburgh when he was running for the presidency the firm of Stevenson & Foster, then 50 years old, formed part of the background for the listeners.

FUR INSIDE OR OUTSIDE THE JACKET MAKES A SMART COSTUME

For the restless life we Americans lead, we need versatile clothes. That is why the formal type of sports clothes, like both costumes in the accompanying sketch, are so important to us. They're terribly hard to classify. If you call them sports clothes, you make a slight mistake, for these like others from the hands of clever American designers, look equally well in town as in the country. It is their loose, casual, comfortable air that makes them so at home everywhere.

If you are on the hunt for a highly individualistic costume that will see you through occasions at the country club, luncheons in town, matinees, and such, choose either of the winter suits sketched. If you are slim, tall, and the type to wear it, choose the cape suit, especially one of those long flared versions lined, like this one, in fur. It is an exceptional beauty, in a bluish grey lined in squirrel, warm and soft as protection against cool winds. With it a bright purple cotton blouse.

The fur-jacketed suit on the right is a mouth-watering example from the hands of the same designer. The color combination should stir your imagination—dark grey moleskin, lined with a rich lipstick red called sealing-wax red this season, matches the red woolen dress beneath. An ascot of American broadtail, dyed the same red, ties at the throat. The coat is loose, boxy and careless in the accepted fashion.

Whether you buy a dress with some sort of matching jacket, like either of these suits, or match a separate jacket to the dresses you already have, is up to you. The length of the jacket is quite important, however. Newest variations end somewhere between the knee and finger-tip length. Almost every one hangs loosely from the shoulders, with some degree of flare in back. Very youthful models flare both front and back.

Duquesne Group Plans to Open Kindergarten

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

An ambitious and decidedly praiseworthy venture is to be undertaken by the Duquesne Young Women's Club. It is to conduct a kindergarten in the clubroom in the Duquesne Carnegie Library. Beginning Wednesday, October 4, when registrations will be received, the club will sponsor the kindergarten Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of each week for children from 3½ to school age, and the young women are especially stressing that it's not to be confined to children of club members.

Mrs. George Kemerer, chairman of the educational committee and herself a graduate kindergartner, will conduct the new undertaking and will include story telling, dramatizations, folk dancing, singing and handcraft in the course of instruction. A nominal fee to cover operating expenses will be required for entrance.

The club's opening tea on Saturday afternoon is to be held in Miss Leilah Newmyer's home in Catherine street. The social committee chairman, Miss Martha Regester, and her co-chairman, Mrs. Robert Sanner, will have charge of the tea and the program will be under the supervision of Miss Betty Walker.

Miss Jessie Luehm will sing, Miss Anna Grace Liebegott will offer piano solos and the club chorus also will contribute to the program.

Leaflet of League Contains Article By Kenyon

There is evidence that circumstances are shaping constructive adaptations making for a more stable, more ethically conducted theater than we have had, says Elmer Kenyon, head of the drama department, Carnegie Institute of Technology, in an article appearing in the season's first number of the Drama League Review, official organ of the Pittsburgh Drama League.

The current issue also contains an announcement that Miss Mary Ward, of the Civic Repertory Theater, will be in Pittsburgh during the week of November 26 and will be available for a limited number of lectures, under auspices of the league. Bookings are being made by Miss Helen St. Peter, of North Dithridge street.

The first large meeting of the league will be a drama institute, to be held November 4 at the Pennsylvania College for Women, under the chairmanship of Miss Vanda E. Kerst, one of the directors. The institute will consist of two sessions, one morning and the other afternoon, with luncheon at the college.

CLOSE BATTLE EXPECTED IN DUKES, W. VA. MEETING

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Giants, Senators Changed. Few Players of 1924 Left. Costly Blunder on Hubbell.

ONLY SIX SURVIVORS AFTER NINE YEARS

Big league ball clubs pass quickly. When the Giants and Senators meet in the world series next week, they will have on their rosters only six of the 42 men who appeared as players when the same clubs competed for the title in 1924. Three are left on each side—Travis Jackson, Bill Terry and Frank Snyder with New York, and Ossie Bluege, Goose Goslin and Sam Rice with Washington. Goslin and Snyder have not remained continuously with their teams. Snyder's playing days are over and he has become a coach. Jackson and Rice no longer are regulars, though the former will be in the series as a replacement for Johnny Vergez.

Travis Jackson

Of the surviving Giant trio, only Jackson was a full-time performer in the series nine years ago, and even he is now in a different position. Terry shared the first-base duties with George Kelly. Snyder's only appearance was made as a pinch-hitter.

Of the 36 others who participated in the 1924 series, only seven remain in the majors as players. They are Freddie Lindstrom, Frankie Frisch, Hack Wilson, Tom Zachary, Fred Marberry, Joe Judge and Rosy Ryan. Muddy Ruel and Hank Gowdy still are in the big show, but only as coaches.

FAMOUS OLD NAME RETURNS TO BASEBALL

One of the most famous figures of the old days in baseball, and a particular standout in the diamond history of Pittsburgh, may live again in the big leagues in a year or two, though only in name. There may be another Jimmy Galvin.

The new edition bearing the name made immortal in baseball by the great Pittsburgh pitcher of yesteryear is a catcher. The Red Sox tried him a couple of seasons ago after he had attracted attention on the sandlots in his home town of Somerville, Mass., but he drifted to the minors.

For Richmond, in the Piedmont League, young Galvin made such a good showing this year that the Baltimore club has bought his release, and scouts believe he may become a fixture in the big show after he has gained further experience in the International League.

ORIGINAL ONE OF GREATEST OF HIS TIME

The original Jimmy Galvin was one of the foundation stones of professional baseball in Pittsburgh, and as a pitcher for the old Alleghenys, in 1876 and 1877, and later for the Pittsburgh club in the American Association, National League and Players' League, with shorter engagements in Buffalo and St. Louis, he rated with the greatest of his time. Old-time fans here used to date everything from a famous home run he made to win his own game for the Alleghenys against the Boston Nationals, 1 to 0, May 2, 1877.

Coming back to the local American Association club from Buffalo in 1885, Galvin remained to form with Ed Morris, Jim McCormick and Billy Bishop this city's first pitching staff in the National League in 1887. Jimmy pitched Pittsburgh's first two games in the National League, defeating John Clarkson and the Chicago club, 6 to 2, and repeating against Lady Baldwin and the Detroit team, 8 to 3. In 1892, Manager Al Buckenberger, of the Pirates, traded Galvin to St. Louis for Second Baseman Cub Stricker, and then traded Stricker to Baltimore for Pitcher Bill (Adonis) Terry. Galvin was released by St. Louis after 10 games. He died here in 1901.

GIANT VICTORY DUE TO TIGER MISTAKE

Ty Cobb

Bucky Harris would have had a pennant contender, and his recent resignation as manager would not have been thought of if his predecessors had not made one of the most colossal blunders in baseball history by discarding Hubbell as a hopeless failure.

Ty Cobb pulled the first boner in 1926 by advising Hubbell to develop some other delivery in place of his screwball and farming him to Toronto. The following year, Cobb again ridiculed the screwball and demoted Carl to Decatur. Succeeding Cobb as Detroit pilot in 1928, George Moriarty also told Hubbell he'd never get anybody out with that screwball, and soon the southpaw was shipped to Beaumont. From that club, with Detroit's consent, though Moriarty insists he was not consulted, the Giants bought Hubbell in midseason of 1928 for $25,000. And look at him now, with the screwball that Cobb and Moriarty derided.

WALTON MOST IMPROVED LINEMAN AT PITT

If a vote were taken among the coaches and players of the University of Pittsburgh football squad as to the most improved lineman of the year so far in the Panther camp, there is little doubt that Frank (Tiger) Walton, of Beaver Falls, rugged right tackle, would get the majority of the ballots.

This despite the improvement shown by Cheeso Onder, veteran right guard. Walton always has been a strong defensive lineman. Once he almost ousted Charley Tully from a job, and after he got into the regular lineup last season it was impossible for any rival to get him out.

MUCH BETTER NOW AS OFFENSIVE PLAYER

The Tiger got his chance as a varsity man last fall when Bobby Hoel discovered that a tackle couldn't play high against Army. Walton proceeded to slow down the Cadet advance, a week later he played hob with Ohio State, and next he had a glorious day wrecking Notre Dame's short side plays and cutbacks. But, while he was starring defensively, Frank was not helping out his halfbacks well enough when it came to clearing the way on the offensive. His interfering was mediocre, to be charitable.

Tiger Walton

This year, however, finds Walton really playing football. Just as rugged and effective as in 1932 on the defensive, he has trained himself down to 201 pounds and is pulling out of the line much faster than it was figured he ever would be able to do. Once out, he has been mowing down the enemy's secondary with nice precision. Right now, the Tiger rates as Coach Sunderland's No. 1 tackle, but he is not permitting the apparent certainty of a starting berth lead him into letting down in his practice efforts or to rest on his prospects. On the contrary, there is no harder worker on the Pitt squad than the "Mayor of Seventh Avenue," as Walton is known in Beaver Falls.

The Pirates came back to Pittsburgh today after a sojourn in St. Louis where yesterday they dropped their final clash of the season with the Cards by the score of 6 to 3. The Buccos, however, should not feel too bad over the defeat as they won 14 of their 22 battles against the Redbirds, who are a good ball club.

The Pirates own a lead of one game over the Cubs in the fight for second place. Each team has two games to play before the curtain falls. The campaign closes Sunday with the Pirates playing a dual bill in Cincinnati.

Greenville is entertaining the Buccos today and New Bethlehem will be host to the big leaguers tomorrow. Friday will see the Buccos disporting themselves in Fairmont.

The Buccos used three pitchers in their attempt to land the farewell encounter with the Cardinals. Hal Smith started on the mound for the Gibson Clan, but the task was too severe for Hal, French and Swift also doing a slab trick. One of the 14 hits made by the Cards was Medwick's homer.

Southpaw Bill Walker couldn't beat the Pirates all summer long, but he turned the trick in the finale.

TERRY, CRONIN FAR APART IN ACTIONS

(This article, dealing with the managers and strategy boards, is the fifth and last of a series comparing the different departments of the Giants and Senators who will clash in the coming world series.)

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Bill Terry and Joe Cronin, youthful pilots who will match their wits in the world series, are far apart in temperaments, yet they seem to have something in common. Terry is not demonstrative, while Cronin has so much animation he is apt to push his friends and sometimes casual acquaintances all over the premises in a good-natured way.

In a straw-hat riot among the Senators, Cronin is said to have grabbed Owner Clark Griffith's kelly and belted it for a goal. The fact that it turned out to be a costly panama, did not seem to bother the kid pilot.

Opposite in their natures, the two leaders have a high opinion of each other. To illustrate, it might be interesting here to print something new regarding Bill and Joe.

CRONIN BUST HERE

Cronin had little chance to shine as a shortstop in Pittsburgh. He played something like 15 games at the position. Apparently there were many players who figured Joe would develop into a star, but the boys of the diamond cannot prevent the passing of another from their circuit.

John McGraw, doubtless misled by the Pirate verdict on Cronin, was included in the rival managers who permitted Cronin to drift to Kansas City. It wasn't long before the mistake on Cronin made a lot of National League pilots look bad.

Bill Terry was one of the players who liked Cronin's style. But Terry was just a private in the ranks. Bill was in Pittsburgh with his team shortly after Cronin had begun to show his real worth. In a discussion Bill said:

"Say, how did young Cronin get out of this league! I didn't know he was gone. There is one boy I liked right from the start. I wouldn't waive on a player like that. He had the stuff and it was only a question of time until he showed it."

So you see Terry knows a thing or two about players in his quiet way. And he puts over flights of strategy without much racket. Members of the New York club are strong in their praise of Bill as a strategist.

Terry shows tact as regards Blondy Ryan. Here is a first-year shortstop who would give the casual observer the impression that he was the field leader of the Giants. And Terry encourages the scrappy shortstop. Bill is not much for fireworks, but he likes to see it in others.

JOE OUTGUESSES VETERANS

Cronin furnishes his own pyrotechnics, yet his moves are so smart that they sometimes baffle veterans like Connie Mack. The way Joe has switched his hurlers this year is a revelation to Mack and the other graybeards.

Bill and Joe may not make any quick moves in the coming scraps, but there is always a chance for something unusual on the part of either. They are right in the infield, where they know the intimate trend of everything, and they will act accordingly.

He is a freshman at South Hills High School and plans to compete in football and basketball there next year. He helped to score a 19-7 polo victory for South Park over Chartiers Heights last Sunday. McClarin is regarded as a future topnotcher in local polo circles. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

PITT ELEVEN DRILLED ON W.-J. PLAYS

By JESS CARVER

The Duquesne-West Virginia football battles of the past, at least the modern past, have been decided by a score, one way or another, and the chances are about even that the game here Friday night will wind up about the same way.

Long years ago, a Mountaineer eleven swamped a team from the Bluff, when football was just another way of putting in the time as far as the locals were concerned. Since gridiron relations were resumed, however, the rivals either have won by the margin of a touchdown or field goal or played to a standstill.

W. VA. DEFENSE GOOD

While their offensive was nothing over which to rave against Washington last Saturday, the Mountaineers paraded a crack defense, one able to hold the Generals to a single first and 10. The Dukes too have shown great defensive ability, Waynesburg scoring a touchdown on a long pass and West Virginia Wesleyan being so bottled up that the Bobcats couldn't even record a first down. The Duquesne attack has looked good in spots, but even in the easy victory over the Bobcats, it showed the need of polish. Against West Virginia's husky line, that polish better had been crack-proof.

The Mountaineers had to battle the Generals minus their regular quarterback, Eck Allen. While Allen is no Cariedo or Newmen, his absence likely had considerable to do with the minus way in which the West Va. attack functioned. He'll be in there against the Dukes.

PITT GETS PLAYS

Pitt and Wash-Jeff looked over each others plays yesterday. Dr. Eddie Baker disgrammed and explained the President formations to the Panthers in a long session on the Pitt practice field. The Panthers hardly knew what to make of it all, so the dummy scrimmage was exceedingly instructive.

It looks very much as if Verne Baxter, sophomore end, who has come to the fore like Equipoise down the stretch, would start against the Red and Black. He's been going great guns at end, and with Harvey Rooker suffering from a slight injury, but not slight enough not to interfere with his work, the former Oliver High School star has declared himself in.

Hank Day isn't worrying over his starting lineup. The goal Hank is striving to attain is to have the entire W. and J. squad in shape for the game. One eleven won't

Middies Not Likely To Attend Game Here

Prospects of local football fans getting a glimpse of the midshipmen of the Naval Academy at the game between Pitt and Navy at the Pitt Stadium on October 14 are none too bright, according to W. Don Harrison, director of athletics at the University of Pittsburgh.

SERIES RIVALS ARRANGE COIN DIVISION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The Washington Senators held a private batting caucus with the slightly-less-lively National League ball that will open the World Series and returned an apparently jubilant verdict to the effect that:

"It rides plenty when you hit it."

The American League champions chased outfielders to all corners of Griffith Stadium in a session yesterday. If there were any dissenting opinions as to what happened when the National League ball was "hit," they couldn't be heard at the batting screen rolled up behind home plate.

Thirty-two players and employes of the Senators will be cut in on winnings of the series, it was decided at a clubhouse meeting yesterday, which Manager Joe Cronin said was marked by complete harmony.

24 FULL SHARES

Twenty-four full shares were voted to Moe Berg, Ossie Bleuge, Bob Boken, Cliff Bolton, Bob Burke, Joe Cronin, Al Crowder, Goose Goslin, Dave Harris, Johnny Kerr, Joe Kuhel, Heinie Manush, Buddy Myer, Sam Rice, Jack Russell, Fred Schulte, Luke Sewell, Walter Stewart, Al Thomas, Monte Weaver, Earl Whitehill, Nick Altrock, and Al Schacht, coaches, and Mike Martin, trainer.

Edward B. Eynon, Jr., secretary of the club, Clubhouse Boy Frank Baxter, and Bill McAfee, recently sent to Rochester, were voted half shares.

A flat $750 was voted Ed Chapman, pitcher, and Emil Haisman, groundkeeper. Pitcher Alec McColl and Third Baseman Cecil Travis were allotted $500 each, while Assistant Secretary Billy Smith was voted $200.

GIANTS SADDENED

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Injury to their leader, Bill Terry, and the tragic death of the infant daughter of Johnny Vergez somewhat saddened what should have been a joyous occasion for the New York Giatns, a meeting to decide what division would be made of their share of the world series receipts.

Terry appeared at the gathering yesterday, held in the clubhouse at the Polo Grounds, where the Giants will open the series with Washington a week from today, with a bruised thumb on his throwing hand, injured in yesterday's game with Boston. He made light of his injury, however, and said he would be in shape for the series.

Vergez, just recovering from an attack of appendicitis, seemed definitely lost to the team for the series as he speeded West to the bedside of his wife, critically ill in Oakland, Cal., following the birth of the baby by a caesarian operation. Even if Mrs. Vergez should live it was thought unlikely Johnny would be back for the series. Their first child, a boy, died over a year ago of infantile paralysis.

VOTED FULL SHARE

With 20 other of the 24 players eligible for the series, Vergez was voted a full share by his teammates, along with Jim Tierney, club secretary, the three coaches, Tom Clarke, Frank Snyder and Al Smith and the club trainer, Willie Schaeffer.

Half shares were voted to John Salveson, pitcher, and Harold Danning, catcher, both of whom are eligible for the series, but unlikely to play, and quarter shares will be given to Charles Dressen, third baseman who recently joined the team and may play in Vergez' place, and Bill Shores, recently recalled pitcher. Dressen was added to the series eligible list by Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, on Terry's plea and with the consent of the Senators.

GOLDEN GLOVES BATTLING ENDS

Three of the eight championships in the Golden Gloves amateur boxing tournament, completed last night with the staging of semi-final and final bouts in the St. Anthony's auditorium, Millvale, went to boxers from Kittanning, Pa. The Willow Club, of Pittsburgh, won two and the Tucker A. C., of Washington, Pa., the Linwood Club and the Natrona A. C. getting one each.

The ring collapsed as Johnny Ochs, of the Willow Club, and Johnny Schuster, of the Linwood Club, were battling for the heavyweight crown and the seconds and officials had to hold the one side of the ring up throughout the third round.

Announcement was made today of a Western Pennsylvania amateur boxing championship tournament to be staged from October to January, with preliminary eliminations in the various counties.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE KEY TO SEX—Although scientists are unable to give a clear explanation of such remarkable and mysterious ability, George Bove, of New York, actually can determine the sex of the penman by suspending a key over a single written word in the manner shown in my cartoon. Bove says he never has made an error in proving this ability, and in my office a large number of examples were given him—on every one of which he determined the sex of the writer correctly.

TOMORROW: THE NO-FARE TRAIN.

AMBRIDGE HIGH, MT. LEBANON AWAIT GAME

By JULIUS LEVIN

One of the outstanding scholastic football games on this week's schedule is listed for Friday afternoon at Mt. Lebanon High School Field where Mt. Lebanon and Ambridge, two undefeated elevens in the race for the class A crown of the W. P. I. A. L., will come together.

Both teams will have an added incentive to drive them on to victory, Mt. Lebanon striving to avenge an 18-0 setback suffered in Ambridge last season, while the Bridgers will be out to score their twelfth successive triumph.

TEAMS REBUILT

Both teams will present several new faces in the starting lineups as they suffered heavy losses at graduation time. Despite the heavy loss of veteran material, the rival schools are reported to have powerful grid machines and fans following the two contenders for the title are anticipating a terrific struggle from start to finish.

Two games have been advanced to Thursday, one a City League clash between Fifth Avenue and Westinghouse and the other between Trinity and McDonald at Washington.

The City League will offer an attractive program on Friday with two contests in Section I and three in Section II.

The headliner in Section I, of course, will be the annual battle between South and Schenley at Schenley High Field. South is being picked to make a strong fight for the Section I crown, but the Tenth street gridders must pass this difficult hurdle to remain in the running. South opened its season impressively with a one-sided victory over Trinity, while Schenley made a game fight with Wilkinsburg before losing, 6 to 0.

PERRY AT LANGLEY

Perry begins the defense of its City championship by opposing Langley at Langley in the feature battle in Section II. Perry had to fight from start to finish to eke out a 12-6 victory over Allderdice in a pre-season struggle and will have to show a big improvement.

BASEBALL COMEDY

By NICK ALTROCK

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—Well, Lou Gehrig has certainly clinched something or other in playing all those consecutive games. And, next to "Abie's Irish Rose" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin," he now holds the long run record.

But, no fooling, that's a lot of games to be in without springing a charley horse or sassing an umpire. However, Lou still has my record to shoot at, which consists of answering the dinner bell for 46,788 consecutive times, without missing a thing from soup to nuts.

Another shiny mark is more than 1,000 circuit slaps the big league boys have plopped into the stands this season. It's got so that just watching a ball game in the centerfield bleachers is a hazardous occupation.

HONUS TO DOPE WORLD SERIES

Giants vs. Senators.

Which club will win the world series?

Hear what Pittsburgh's most famous player, a hero of past world series, thinks about the forthcoming games.

Honus Wagner

He's none other than Honus Wagner.

Wagner will speak on the series as a guest of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph over WCAE Thursday evening at 7 o'clock.

With him will be Pitcher Larry French, of the Pirates, and Charles J. Doyle, baseball expert, and Harry Keck, sports editor of the Sun-Telegraph.

Honus also will cover the series for the Sun-Telegraph, along with Doyle and a group of other notables.

Remember the date of Honus' broadcast. Beginning this week, the Seals are heard on Thursday instead of Wednesday evenings at 7 o'clock.

School Notes

Bob Kornick, all-round back of the Perry High School eleven, defending champion in the City League, is one of the most versatile athletes in the local scholastic realm. Kornick, besides his fine left-footed punting, tosses forward passes with deadly accuracy and directs the team on the field. During the last basketball campaign he was picked as one of the all-City League forwards, ranking second only to Bill Jesko, of South.

Johnny Grad, who stood out so prominently in South High School's impressive victory over Trinity in the opening game of the season, is the same boy who ranked as one of the best fullbacks in the City League last season. This season he is being tried at halfback.

One of the most promising fullbacks developed in the local high school ranks this season is Stephen Matvey, plunging ace of the Taylor Allderdice eleven. Matvey displayed a lot of class in the opening battle with Perry High School and is going to bear watching in the fight for the local championship.

Moved up to Class A ranking in football, Rankin High School, coached by Jock Rosenberg is likely to cut a wide path in the title race this season. Rankin has appeared impressive in its first two games, swamping Follansbee and waging a scoreless deadlock with Homestead. Those who saw the clash with Homestead claim Bill Campbell's team was lucky to emerge with a draw. A powerful line is one of Rankin's main assets this fall.

Overlooked last season when all-scholastic teams were being selected, Roberts, brilliant Negro halfback of the Peabody High School eleven, has started off just where he finished last fall. Roberts is one of the speediest ball-carriers in the City League and once he breaks away he is a tough man to stop.

Another Webb is starring on the Taylor Allderdice line this season. He is Billy, brother of Johnny, who was selected all-City League end by the Sun-Telegraph last season. Johnny has been graduated from Allderdice and will enroll at the University of Pittsburgh next year.

GRIMM PLANS FOR 1934

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Charley Grimm, who yesterday signed as manager of the Chicago Cubs for another year, already is laying plans for the 1934 season.

The Cub pilot went into a huddle with President William Veeck and aside from going through the formality of signing the new contract, it is understood that plans for the coming year were the main topic of conversation. In renewing his contract for another year Grimm spiked rumors that he was through as Cub manager.

The Cubs are expected to renew their bid for Chuck Klein, the hard-hitting Philadelphia outfielder. The Phillies have turned down many offers for Klein, but it is reported that the deal will go through this time.

RYAN STOPPED

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Frankie Ryan, of Charleston, recognized as light-neavyweight champion of West Virginia, was knocked out last night in the closing seconds of the second round by Al Gatchel, Cleveland, O. The bout was carded for 10 rounds.

FAR AWAY

"Far away . . . far away!" The very words are mournful, lonely. They speak of broken home ties, scattered families. They quicken memories of long-lost friends. • Have you friends or family far away? Let the telephone span the barrier of miles. Tonight, if you will, you can share their news . . . hear their laughter . . . join their circle. • Say the word! In a twinkling you will be talking as though face-to-face. "Far away" is only a mirage. With a telephone you are there!

Thrilling . . . easy . . . and inexpensive, too! For instance, do you realize you can telephone from one end of Pennsylvania to the other for 85 cents at the low night rates?

MISS ABERNETHY THIRD IN STATE GOLF PLAY

OAKMONT STAR CARDS 81 TO LEAD LOCALS

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Match play for the first Pennsylvania Women's golf championship starts today with three former national champions among the 16 qualifiers.

Edith Quier, of Reading, established herself as a favorite yesterday by capturing the qualifying medal with a course record-breaking 75. She shattered the 4-year-old mark of 77 set by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, one of the three former champions who qualified for the present tourney.

PIRATES HOLD SLIM EDGE

Associated Press.

The National League race is over, as far as the pennant winning New York Giants are concerned, but the Pirates, Cubs and Cardinals are carrying a fight right down to the finish in their battle for second and third places in the final standings.

With only one game remaining on their schedule and that with Cincinnati on the final day of the season, Sunday, the Pirates hold an upper hand in the contest for second place. They can be ousted by Chicago, however, if the Cubs take their two final games with St. Louis and the Reds trim the Corsairs.

The Pirates lost a chance to clinch second place yesterday when they dropped a 6-to-3 decision to St. Louis in one of the two games played in the major leagues.

In the only other game, the Brooklyn Dodgers strengthened their hold on sixth place by defeating the Phillies, 7 to 2, behind the seven-hit pitching of Walter Beck.

Cochet Crushed By Bill Tilden

PARIS, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—William T. Tilden, patriarch of American tennis, has accomplished in brilliant fashion as a professional what he had failed to do as an amateur Davis Cup player from 1927 to 1930, defeat Henri Cochet, to give the United States victory in a professional series with France.

Playing in a form reminiscent of the Tilden who ruled the tennis world from 1920 to 1927, Big Bill required just 55 minutes and three sets to crush his nemesis of amateur days yesterday, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Alleged Dopers Held for Court

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Sept. 26.—(INS.)—William Smith, Danville, Va., and James G. Branovich, Charlestown, W. Va., arrested at the race track for possessing morphine sulphate, yesterday were held for grand jury action.

They claimed they were drug addicts and denied they carried the drug in connection with any horse-doping scheme.

CONNERS MEETS ONERETTA

By TOM BIRKS

Monty Oneretta, of Schenley Park, and Joe Conners, of the Chartiers Heights Country Club, are clashing in the final round of the annual golf tournament of Western Pennsylvania caddiemasters and assistant professionals at the Stanton Heights Golf Club this afternoon.

Oneretta entered the final round by defeating Frank Bruno, of the Nemacolin Country Club, in the semi-final round this morning, 3 and 2. Conners flashed great golf in his semi-final match with Andy Brannigan, of Churchill Valley. He was out in 35 and back in 37 for a 72, and he won, 4 and 3.

LOCAL PROS WIN

The members of the Tri-State Professionals Golf Association came through their first interstate match against a team from Ohio with flying colors at Wildwood yesterday, winning a nip and tuck match, 7 to 6.

Taking the lead in the Scotch foursomes in the morning, 3 to 2, the local members of the paid brigade battled hard to hold the slender advantage.

Toots Erath, of Edgewood, and Andy Velican teamed up to turn in the outstanding victory of the Scotch type of play, having a 68 to beat Jack Thompson and Harry Reese, 3 and 2, eight birdies being recorded in this tilt.

In the afternoon round of individual match play, it remained for Ted Luther, popular professional at Valley Heights, to set off the fireworks. Ted was matched against Ohio's ace player, Al Espinosa, who last week won the Ohio State open title with a record score.

ESPINOSA BEATEN

Espinosa has a national reputation, and Luther was out to make one. The Valley Heights man played superb golf and was 4 up at the turn. This evidently did not bother the Buckeye State star, for he proceeded to win four holes in a row and tie up the match. But Luther once again forged ahead and ended the match with a stymie on the seventeenth green.

Vince Eldred lost a match on the home green to Reggie Myles, 1 up; Ed Kirby and Pete O'Hara finished all even; Bob Randall defeated Nelson Zimmerman, 4 and 2, with a medal score of 70; Charley Manning stopped Carl Bendental, 1 up; Jack Thompson defeated Andy Velican, 3 and 1; Walter Johnstone turned in the easiest win of the day, swamping Jack Reese, 5 and 3; Perry Del Vecchio defeated Lloyd Gullickson, 2 up; Bob Shade stopped Emil Loeffler, 4 and 3, and Bill Crain and Walter Loeffler finished all even.

A return match will be played over the links of the Cleveland Country Club, Monday, October 16.

STARS PLAY HERE

Denny Shute, British open champion, paired with Ed Dudley, professional at Bobby Jones' Atlanta course, appear here in an exhibition match tomorrow, meeting Nelson Zimmerman and Emil Loeffler in an 18-hole, best ball match over the links of the Wildwood Country Club.

The match starts at 2 p. m.

H. S. Lambert was crowned men's champion and Mrs. W. W. Colledge women's champion at Valley Heights yesterday. Lambert defeated J. B. Canfield, 13 and 12, while Mrs. Colledge won her title with a medal score of 103-106—209.

DONLIN RITES TODAY

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 26.—(INS.)—Funeral services for Mike Donlin, one-time famed big league baseball star, were to be conducted in the chapel of Hollywood Cemetery this afternoon.

After today, Tech's varsity squad will be called out for only one workout each day. The squad is rounding into condition as fast as the coaches could desire, and with classes due to get under way tomorrow, the Plaid will not be called out until 5 o'clock daily.

Funeral services for A. A. (Andy) McDonald, former graduate manager of athletics at Westminster and one of the moving figures behind the Tri-State Conference during its formative years, whose death Sunday night at Mercy Hospital followed a stroke, will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home of his parents, 101 Washington avenue, Bellevue.

The Tipoff

Joe (Trig) Hardy, who starred as a back and end at Bellefonte Academy, has reported to Coaches Cann and DiMelo at N. Y. U. after being ineligible for two years. Hardy, big and fast, likely will play an end for the Violets.

Waynesburg, considerably battered up after its scarce with Bucknell last week, is down to hard work for the game with Slippery Rock this week. The Jackets are in for a busy time with the Teachers, who started off on the right foot by bumping Westminster. A couple years back, they did the same thing to the Jackets.

Jimmy Robertson is driving his Geneviens at top speed these fine days. The Covenanters had an easy time in their opener with the California State Teachers, but they will have their work cut out for them this week against West Virginia Wesleyan. The Bobcats may be counted upon to show a vast improvement over what they exhibited here against the Dukes.

All Gene Edwards has to worry over this week at St. Vincent is a nice tough opening game against St. Bonaventure at Olean, N. Y., this coming Sunday. Edwards' eleven failed to click in a practice game last Saturday against a team of sandlotters, at least, it failed to click with Gene. The former Notre Dame star is counting on his crack halfback, as good a ball lugger as there is in the district, to spark the team's offense this fall.

GRID PIRATES CHANGE TEAM

Three important changes will be made in the lineup of the Pittsburgh Pirates professional football team for their game with the Chicago Cardinals at Forbes Field tomorrow night, it was announced today.

Elmer Schwarcz, former Washington State star, will be moved to quarterback, replacing Schaffer, of W. & J., who started the season there. Nick DeCarbo, formerly of Duquesne University, will be at left guard instead of Letzinger, of Purdue, and Jimmy Clarke, formerly of Pitt, will replace Bucky Moore at halfback, with Tony Holm remaining at fullback and Angelo Brovelli at the other half.

SHARKEY MADE BIG FAVORITE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 26. —(AP.)—Deposed as heavyweight ruler and beaten in his latest start, Jack Sharkey, former tar, takes another step on the comeback trail tomorrow night in a 15-round meeting with the Philadelphia boxing master, Tommy Loughran.

The bout, to be waged in the Phillies ball park, is the first of its length in Pennsylvania since the State Legislature extended the limit from 10 rounds at its last session.

Sharkey, defeated by King Levinsky less than two weeks ago, will go into the ring with perhaps a 10-pound weight advantage and the memory of a three-round knockout he scored four years ago in New York.

Bill Alexander

The linesman was stationed in his usual position, but was empowered to call holding penalties in the line, as well as off-side plays. The umpire, instead of standing back of the defensive line, was stationed at the opposite end of the line of scrimmage from the linesman. The umpire watched for holding in the line, but also was empowered to call off-side or in-motion penalties. The referee and field judge occupied their usual positions.

In effect, the game had two linesmen with the duties of the umpire divided between them. It was an experiment and it worked well. Many coaches have long contended that the umpire was in the way of the players when he stood back of the defensive line and, in addition, was standing where he could not see holding on the part of the offensive linesmen.

OFFICIALS SCORED

All this is interesting, but not important. I think officials these days are more concerned with occupying the proper positions on the field and with the mechanics of the game than they are with making instant and consistent decisions on fouls. Referees, for instance, are worrying so much over giving the proper hand signals to the press and crowd on fouls that they are forgetting about the ball, the players, and consistency in whistle blowing.

The referee's whistle kills the ball. When that whistle blows the ball is dead, the play ends and nothing can be done about it. I have seen a referee blow his whistle when the back carrying the ball was in an open field with no opposing players near him. One referee will use a quick whistle, another a slow one. The result is confusion to the players and injustice to the teams.

The quick whistle penalizes the hard-fighting back who gamely jerks away from the grasp of a tackler by calling the ball dead at the point of first contact with the tackler. Furthermore, a quick whistle makes it almost impossible for the defensive team to recover a fumble, since the whistle sounds as the fumble is being made and kills the ball. In this case the ball goes back to the offensive team. The very slow whistle is just as bad, as it encourages piling on the runner after he has been definitely stopped.

DECIDES BIG GAME

The worst official of the species is the man who blows quickly on several plays and slowly on the next. I know of one big game that was lost last year because the referee blew a quick whistle during the first part of the game and during that time penalized the team several times for piling on after the whistle. This team became afraid to have more than one tackler stop the runner for fear of a quick whistle and a piling-on penalty. Later in this game the referee was slow on his whistle on a line play. The runner tore loose from a lone tackler and ran past a surprised crowd of defensive backs for the winning touchdown.

Columbus Wins And Evens Series

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—With the little world series square at one game each, the Columbus Redbirds, of the American Association, and the Buffalo Bisons, of the International League, will play the third game tonight under the electric lights.

Columbus won yesterday's tilt, 8 to 4, in a slugfest that included a fourth-inning attack of home runs. The Bisons had taken the first contest, 7 to 6.

A southpaw will face a right-hander in tonight's game. Manager Ray Blades will send Lefty Heise to the mound for the Birds and Gallivan, who shone in a relief role in the first game of the series, is slated for the Buffalo hurling assignment.

GRAPHIC GOLF

COMFORTABLE SWING BEST

Watching Macdonald Smith or Tommy Armour in action, a golfer often is inclined to wonder how they achieve so much yardage when the stroke is not always a vigorous one. Naturally with these two stars the stroke has been so perfected that they get the maximum of distance out of a minimum of effort, due largely to the use of their body in the stroke and accurate timing. The average player, however, who lunges at the ball with all the power at his command might be appreciably surprised were he to try an easier stroke. In fact, if he should be interested enough to experiment, he would find that the comfortable stroke which took the ball accurately would not be far behind the swing in which he put all his power, and far straighter.

Errors are common in the viciously-hit shot, due most often to a faulty use of the body, a factor that is lessened in the easier swing. The place to practice such a stroke, however, is on a practice course, for in the heat of competition one soon may revert to the more vigorous swing.

Keep at the comfortable swing until it becomes a part of your game, and the score will begin to lower itself appreciably.

Reds Face Sandlot All-Stars Today

Often has it been said, sometimes jocularly, sometimes seriously, that any real good amateur team could beat the Reds. Today will tell the tale. For the National League's tail end team will meet a handpicked bunch from the city's sandlots.

Sidney Weil, president, and Donie Bush, manager of the Reds, assented to putting on the game, though they well knew the gamble they were taking. The purpose is not to see how good, or bad, the Reds really are, but to raise some money to carry on the city sandlot leagues.

GIANTS BEAT SING SING

OSSINING, N. Y., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—The New York Giants, new National League champions, brought their regular lineup to Sing Sing yesterday to defeat the Prison Welfare team, 9 to 3, in a seven-inning game that provided a tremendous treat for 2,000 inmates.

RUTH REVEALS PLANS, AIMS FOR 1934

By BABE RUTH
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Here we are at the end of another baseball season, and it seems such a short time ago that I walked into the clubhouse down at our training camp in St. Petersburg and put on my uniform for the first workout of the year. As one grows older the seasons seem to grow shorter, and my twentieth year in the big league seems shortest of all as I look back on it now.

I thought at one time that I would be all through with baseball at the close of my twentieth season. Some years ago I set for myself three goals. I wanted to play 20 years, I hoped to get into 10 world series, and I sort of set 700 home runs as the mark I wanted to reach in that feature of baseball so closely associated with whatever success I have enjoyed.

The first two ambitions I have realized. I needed 48 home runs when this season started, and I fell considerably under that total. However, I have no complaint to make on that score, and I feel that I still will be able to reach that mark. I am now within 20 homers of that total, not counting world series drives, and I am finishing this season with high hopes of playing considerable ball in 1934.

PLANS SAME ROUTINE

I plan to follow my usual routine during the off season with that idea in view. I will play golf four or five days a week as long as the weather permits, and early next year I will go into a gymnasium and go through the special exercising which has done so much to keep me in the majors much longer than the average player has remained.

I plan to go South in February for a month of golf, and then I will give baseball some attention. At least that is my program now. Of course, a ball player is never sure where he will be in another season. I still hope to get an opportunity to try my hand at managing a ball club before I finally bid farewell to the game, but you never can tell about these things. Many other players have had the same idea, but have not had the opportunity.

I mention these things in this article because it is the closing one of the regular season. Next I will discuss the world series teams, and what I believe is likely to happen when Giants and Senators clash.

HAS NO COMPLAINTS

It makes me a little lonesome to be on the outside while all this world series excitement is in the air, but I have no complaints. I have had my share of them; in fact, more than my share, and I am glad to see some of the other fellows get theirs.

It is a fighting, hustling ball team that Joe Cronin will lead into the series, a team that is worthy to take its place with other champions of our league. And I have the highest admiration as well for the team which Bill Terry will lead into battle. Any team that can win a pennant with a batting average of .265 must be thoroughly endowed with courage, or in the language of the sport world, plain guts. When almost every game is a close one because the team has not the batting power to score many runs, it takes a lot to win. And the Giants won.

Rog Plans to Play Third for Browns

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—(AP.)—Looking ahead to next year, Rogers Hornsby, manager of the punchless St. Louis Browns, has about decided on a third baseman who can hit—Rogers Hornsby.

There's nothing definite about it, but the Rajah has left the impression with baseball writers that he will attempt to play regularly in 1934 in an effort to get more runs across the plate.

BALD CAPTURES HARVARD CUP NET TITLE

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Ralph Bald, youthful Mt. Lebanon High School star, wound up the district competitive tennis season yesterday by overwhelming Bill Miller, Taylor Allderdice, 6-1, 6-0, 6-1, in final contest of the eleventh annual Harvard Cup tournament. A sizable gallery saw the rangy Bald add the Allegheny County scholastic singles crown to the Western Pennsylvania junior laurels he had copped two months previously, capture of the Crimson flagon this year carrying with it for the first time official secondary school title of the bailiwick.

Bald never was threatened by the Squirrel Hill contender. Only five games were pushed to deuce by Miller, aside from the pair actually garnered by him and, though plenty of points were hard fought, Bald proved steady enough to return just about everything that the loser flailed across.

The victory of Bald marked the initial instance of an institution's landing a second leg on the Cambridge mug, Henry Ackerman having preceded Ralph by three seasons as a Mount Lebanon winner. The '33 champion, however, will not be on deck next fall to defend his honors, so that likelihood of Mount Lebanon's retiring the cup permanently at that time is not outstandingly bright.

The fifth annual Greenbrier autumn racquet tourney has been announced as a White Sulphur Springs (W. Va.) feature of the week of October 9. Men's and women's singles and doubles and mixed doubles will comprise the card.

CAPTAIN ELECTED

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 26.—(AP.)—John Heuss, 21-year-old tackle from Lansing, Mich., has been elected captain of the Northwestern football team. Coach Dick Hanley first announced he would name a captain before each game, but changed his mind and the squad voted after practice yesterday.

STOCKS FAIRLY FIRM IN LIGHT TURNOVER

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The inflationary bee buzzed but faintly in financial markets today and cautious traders, though cheerful, were inclined to restrain their enthusiasm for ultra-bullish or bearish sentiment.

Stocks, fairly firm during most of the session, were turned over in an extremely small volume. A few specialties, led by the alcohols, moved up substantially. But the ticker tape was not pressed at any time and frequnetly it moved at a halting gait. Grains and cotton were just about steady and other commodities diffident. Bonds mulled about in an unimportant range. The dollar was equally listless in foreign exchange dealings, holding around its previous levels.

Share gainers of 3 to 4 points included Allied Chemical, National Distillers, Seaboard Oil and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit. Other advances of fractions to around 2 points were recorded by United States Steel, Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, Du Pont, New York Central, Santa Fe, Western Union, American Can, Case, Consolidated Gas, United States Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, Manhattan Elevated and Manhattan Guaranteed.

People's Gas passed its dividend, and the stock dropped about 7 points on the first sale. United States Smelting, however, declared a 50-cent extra disbursement, and Allied Chemical paid the regular. Interest in New York traction stocks was believed to reflect hopes that the city's present financial stringency would be eased through some agreement with the banks.

Although proponents of currency expansion apparently have renounced hopes of any greenback inflation in the near future, most of them are still convinced that soon or late the administration will be forced into starting up the printing presses. Their view is that the huge debt aggregate of the country cannot be reduced without greatly increasing money in circulation. The longer controlled inflation is postponed, they claim, the more likely the nation will eventually be subjected to the uncontrolled variety.

Brokerage and financial circles, however they may differ as to the expediency of monetary and credit expansion policies, are generally agreed that the administration is now inclined to promote a sound money program on one basis or the other. Bankers, most of whom are hotly opposed to the inflationists, are still hoping for some sort of a sound money statement from Washington. Some of these financiers believe that stocks, while they might be momentarily depressed by a currency stabilization announcement, would soon see a bullish argument in the placing of a definite value on the American monetary unit.

Advocates of a stabilized dollar are disposed to attribute some of the recent recessions in industry to currency uncertainties. Future planning of trade and business, they contend, would be on a broader and more constructive basis if the medium of exchange could be pinned down to a narrower fluctuating range. Some economists, however, feel that, owing to foreign as well as domestic problems, an attempt to stabilize the dollar at this time would be a mistake.

GRAIN PRICES TAKE TUMBLE

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—With sellers in a majority, grain prices underwent an early sag today. A general tendency was shown to await Washington administration developments regarding financial affairs. Opening ⅛@¾ down, wheat later held near the initial limits. Corn started unchanged to ¼ off, and subsequently declined all around.

Upturns of more than a cent a bushel from early bottom figures carried the wheat market later to well above yesterday's finish. The rise accompanied a moderate influx of purchase orders, mainly of eastern origin.

Corn and oats were easy, compared with wheat. Provisions kept about steady.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

BUSINESS GAIN FALLS SHORT OF HOPES

By LEWIS HANEY,
Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—Most of the business measurements for last week show a rise from the preceding week, in which the Labor Day holiday had occurred. On the whole, the rise was a little less than hoped for, and hardly up to normal seasonal proportions.

This leaves the business "curve" still in a declining trend, but one which now is very gradual. There is a possibility that government plans to stimulate business will take effect in October.

Steel production was stepped up at several centers, though not enough to equal seasonal expectations. "Specifying" on old orders to get in on expiring low prices is said to have been the chief factor. New orders apparently declined.

SOME INDEXES LOWER

The production indexes for automobiles, lumber and cotton goods were lower, or showed less than seasonal gains.

Railway carloadings snapped back somewhat better than expected, although not gaining as much as usual for the week.

Retail trade was still a little backward, especially as to the quantities of goods bought, but showed a fair response to better weather conditions.

The volume of bank checks used continued to make an unfavorable showing last week, falling 13 per cent below a year ago. It should be remembered, however, that last year at this time the stock market was at the 1932 peak, which meant large speculative transactions.

BALLYHOO CITED

You will now find the ballyhoo type of financial writer calling attention to the existence of a high spot a year ago at this time, although he was ignoring the preceding low spot in making his "favorable" comparisons a few weeks ago.

Last week most basic raw materials rose in price as the dollar sank to new low levels. Metals and textile materials were up. Speculative grain and provision markets reacted from an overstimulated position, but rallied at the close when fresh government price-raising schemers were announced.

A significant development was the fixing of higher prices by steel producers under their new "code." This was done without the old ballyhoo to "drive in" anticipatory buying.

ADVANCE ORDERS SLOWED

Apparently the industry is now going to accept only "firm" orders. Since the buyer cannot order on the basis of hopes and then either cancel or "specify" as he later decides, he is now slow to place for-

On the whole, the position of the steel industry as to profit prospects is none too encouraging. This industry is not geared to operate on a high price, low volume basis. Under NRA, however, it seems to be headed toward high costs, high prices and hand-to-mouth buying.

The urge to stimulate railway and construction buying steel is thus easy to understand. But here we are up against the high costs and prices, which naturally restrict buying. This is a tough nut to crack.

UNFAVORABLE BALANCE

Another important and instructive news item released during the week covers our foreign trade figures for August.

First, we note that imports have been greatly stimulated by the rapid rise in our domestic prices. High prices here, and speculative purchases to anticipate them, brought a more-than-seasonal increase in August, and the total was about $64,000,000 greater than a year ago.

Our exports, however, were actually $23,000,000 less than a year ago.

Furthermore, exports were down from July, contrary to the usual seasonal tendency, and exports were naturally below imports, giving us a so-called "unfavorable balance of trade."

ENGLAND DISAPPOINTED

Even England has been disappointed in her attempt to stimulate exports by depreciating the pound sterling. But she had more chance of doing so than we, because she did not inflate her domestic prices.

We have raised our internal prices as fast or faster than export prices. This naturally makes our markets a better place for foreigners to sell than to buy.

Penthouse

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

down beside him. A week, two weeks of close intimacy with this girl might make him forget a lot of things that he thought were unforgettable.

"Backgammon?" he asked.

"I'll take you on," she said.

They lunched on the porch, and if Layton disapproved, his manner no longer indicated that Durant was in disfavor. As a matter of fact, Durant was able to discern distinct approval of Gertie in Layton's manner. Furtively eyeing the girl, Layton's master wondered how anyone could fail to approve of Gertie. Certainly she was beautiful and certainly she was gay. Frankness and honesty were written large upon her countenance. If her ethical code did not measure up—but how did he know it didn't?

A Surprising Scene

They played backgammon and checkers through the early afternoon. At 5 Gertie took a nap. Durant read the afternoon papers, and found that all the journals were united in believing that Levitoff's murder was the outcome of a robbery, and that it was merely a coincidence that the pawnbroker was a witness against Siddall.

The keys that he hoped would unlock Murtoch's apartment had arrived shortly after luncheon. There had been no further word from Tony Gazotti, and after dinner Durant's impatience mounted. Several times he was on the verge of going out, of invading Murtoch's apartment on his own. But he restrained himself, realizing that Gertie's companionship was helping him in his restraint. Had he been alone, he knew, he would have given way to impatience.

But finally, at about 11, Gazotti phoned him.

"Murtoch has gone out. He's in a speak on Thirtieth street. His apartment is 25B. You ought to have 30 minutes, at least. And for the love of Mike, let me know if you find out anything."

"Much obliged, Tony."

"You take care of yourself, won't you?" asked Gertie.

It was a commonplace request, but somehow it touched Durant.

"You bet I will," he promised.

In the street below a man nodded to him; he recognized another follower of Tony Gazotti and felt assured about Gertie's safety. He took a taxi and alighted two blocks from the Oklahoma Building. He had to pass the building on which Crelliman's penthouse was perched, and as he neared that building a car stopped before it and Crelliman alighted. Durant stopped; he stepped quickly into an areaway of a private house. It would be most unfortunate if Crelliman saw him now. But Crelliman had eyes for no one except the woman whom he was assisting to alight from the limousine.

Considers Danger

She was laughing, gay. If ever a girl was glad to be with a man, Sue Leonard was glad to be with Jim Crelliman. Hatred in his heart, the emotion equally divided between her and the man, Durant watched the two enter the apartment building. What was Sue doing with Crelliman? And why was she happy, gay, in whatever she was doing?

He stifled the angry impulse to follow them and demand an explanation. He shook his head. That explanation could wait. Just now another matter called him. He walked past the building and turned in to the Oklahoma apartments.

The doorman took him in with the apathetic interest of his kind; the telephone operator showed that acute and obvious disinterest which Durant so frequently — and unconsciously — aroused in young women. They had a way of turning their backs on him which was more flattering, had he known it, than an embrace.

Only the elevator man seemed genuinely aware of Durant's existence. It seemed to the passenger that the operator eyed him with a furtive curiosity, but he set this down to his own nervous apprehension.

He alighted at the twenty-fourth floor and walked toward the door of Gertie Waxted's apartment. But as the elevator descended he wheeled and made for a door above which dimly glowed a red light. He found himself on a narrow stairway, and at the turn halfway up to the next floor he sat down and wiped his forehead with a handkerchief.

Not the hot summer night, not the exertion of climbing the dozen steps, but a sudden realization of what he was doing brought the moisture to his brow. Heretofore, in his odd entanglements with the underworld, he had strictly observed the letter if not the complete spirit of the law. But here was an extralegal matter which he might well regret. He had not even the faint justification of having been engaged in Siddall's behalf. Sue had unceremoniously relieved him of any obligation toward the imprisoned broker.

In behalf of a client, an illegal invasion of a notorious gangster's apartment might have some color of justification. A jury might look leniently upon the too-great enthusiasm of an attorney who tried to save a client from the electric chair, but the courts would frown upon a private investigator who committed burglary in attempting to solve a case in which he was not retained.

Goes Ahead

For a moment he wondered if his friends were right. How many of them had told him that he was not equipped for the career which he had deliberately chosen? How many of them had scoffed at his success and told him that he was merely fortunate, that he had not the hard-boiled nature which future events would inevitably demand of him?

Burglary was a serious thing. And if he were caught in Tim Murtoch's apartment he would be liable to arrest and imprisonment, always provided that the enthusiastic Murtoch didn't shoot the invader of his privacy.

It was a queer case, too. Tony Gazotti's affair had been much less complicated than this . . . But he rose suddenly to his feet. Weighing the dangers of a situation was an admirable caution, but he musn't let caution degenerate into fear. He ascended the remaining steps, found himself in a corridor and walked to the door of Apartment 25-B. It took him less than a minute to find a key which would open the door, and a second later he was inside the apartment and the door was closed behind him.

He stood absolutely still. Against his chest his heart beat with a fury that he felt was audible, but beyond that imagined sound there was nothing to break the stillness of the apartment. His right hand groped cautiously along the wall, found a switch, and the room was suddenly ablaze with light.

GEN. ZACHARY TAYLOR AT BUENA VISTA (1847)

While Gen. Scott (see issue of September 23) was moving his troops to Vera Cruz to advance from the southeast toward Mexico City, Gen. Zachary Taylor marched from the Rio Grande toward the Mexican capital with only 5,000 soldiers. At Buena Vista he met the bulk of the Mexicans under the dictator Santa Maria, outnumbering his own troops three or four times. Nevertheless, Taylor was victorious, another war hero to become U. S. President. (Inaugurated 1849, died 1850.) U. S. History.)

PETER THE GREAT

While the rest of Europe had passed through the splendid stage of the Renaissance, Russia still lived isolated from civilization. It was Peter the Great (1672-1725), a most perplexing character, who dragged Russia to progress. As a youth he traveled in Europe to study science and trade. He built up a strong Russian army and navy, constructed roads, established schools, encouraged mining, framed a code of law. He conquered the Baltic provinces to have a "window" into Europe and built (above) on the Neva his capital, St. Petersburg (later Petrograd, Leningrad). He was farsighted in politics, but cruel and treacherous. He had his wife whipped with the knout and his son Alexis tortured and executed. (Ellis: The Story of the Greatest Nations)

THE WHITE PINE (Pinus Strobus) (Gen. Science)

Trees may have several common but only one scientific name. After "Species Plantarum," by Linneus (1753) the scientific (Latin) name designates the genus (here "Pinus," like a surname) and the species (here "strobus", like the Christian name of an individual). Related species such as white, red, pitch, pines, etc., form the genus of Pinus; related genera such as pines, spruce, firs, larches make the family of Pinaceae.

The white pine has bluish green needles in clusters of five; its branches form horizontal layers. The staminate flowers are yellow, clustered, the pistillate ones pink, solitary. The fruit, maturing in two seasons, is a cone with scales containing the winged seeds. The white pine thrives everywhere from Newfoundland to Georgia, its timber is light, soft, medium strong and elastic, important for carpentry, cabinet and pattern making and matches. DRAINAGE AND WATERPROOFING OF FOUNDATIONS (General Science)

REPRODUCTION

Living matter arises only under influence of existing living matter, according to present knowledge. Reproduction is cell-division. The cell grows and, having attained a certain size, its cytoplasm and nucleus divide each into essentially equal parts, building two independent cells, the parent and offspring. This primary fact underlays also the reproduction of higher plants and animals, but is obscured by accompanying phenomena.

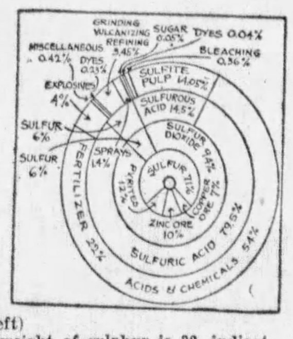
SULPHUR

Sulphur is a non-metallic element, found almost pure in volcanic regions (Sicily, Iceland, Japan, Mexico) and in underground salt-domes in Texas. Natural sulphur occurs in rhombic crystals which change into monoclinic above 96° F. (Above left)



The atomic weight of sulphur is 32, indicating its atomic structure: 32 protons and 32 electrons, half of the latter being satellites distributed in three shells (left).

Sulphur is found in compounds as: Pyrite (FeS_2), lead sulphide (PbS), zinc blende (ZnS), chalcopyrite ($CuFeS_2$), gypsium ($CaSO_4.2H_2O$), barite ($BaSO_4$) and epsom salt ($MgSO_4.7H_2O$). Proteins contain sulphur, hence the offensive smell (H_2S) on decay of plant and animal bodies. Above: Distribution of sulphur among major industries in the U. S. (Holmes: Introd. Junior Patrol Mail Box

What you do with your time outside of school, fellows, is just as important as the hours you spend in school.

We know some fellows who just loaf around when school is over. A real energetic fellow and a member of the Junior Patrol will always try to get things done. After school hours is a good time to hold Junior Patrol meetings and to play games. And it's always a good idea to be working at something you are specially interested in outside of your school work.

We know one fellow who had a lot of fun raising tropical fish. He started with a pair of little fish called "guppies"—fish smaller than the smallest goldfish, and soon he had lots of guppies and had added many other kinds of fish too.

Another fellow we know has lots of fun selling subscriptions for newspapers and magazines. He meets lots of people and learns to know why people buy things and what interests them most.

Then, we had a friend once who collected air mail stamps —he would write letters to foreign countries and have them sent back air mail. Some of them he sold and made money.

We know some kids who learned to recite poetry. You know, lots of kids don't like poetry—but that's just because they don't understand it—and these fellows had a lot of fun memorizing poetry and people asked them to recite it for meetings and clubs. Poetry is like music in words.

Now what do you think about this as an idea? Mary O'Connor, of 131 Blackhawk street, writes this letter:

"We have given our club and members each a mysterious name. The name of the club is 'The Mystery Club.' There are secrets which will not be told."

We'll say that's fun, Mary! You have us all very curious, but we won't ask you to tell your secrets because we know that in a club it's much more fun to have just the members know the secret signals and codes.

Who wants an audition to play in the Junior Patrol orchestra over the radio? Send in your name and address, tell what instrument you play and what experience you have had. We are anxious to get the orchestra started real soon. Hurry, fellows!

Expedite the Count!

The Returning Board should Leave Nothing Undone to Assure Completion of Its Job on Time.

The Returning Board, which is officially counting the primary vote, completed the count of only four districts in the first two days after it began work.

The official figures of the four districts were considerably different from the unofficial figures on which was based the belief that William A. Magee had won and C. B. Connelley had lost one of the Republican nominations for City Council.

Completion of the count at the earliest possible moment is desirable, that uncertainty as to who are the nominees may be ended.

At the rate at which the Returning Board began its work more than 200 days would be required for its completion. If it took that long, the nominations could not be officially certified until after the election, and if something should prove to be wrong it would be too late to correct it. The count must be certified by October 24.

In the circumstances it is gratifying that the Returning Board is to hold night sessions. Whatever steps may be necessary to assure prompt completion of the work should be taken forthwith.

Oppressive Imports

America Needs Additional Protection From the Dumping Of Pauper-Made Foreign Goods.

If it is a part of our program to prevent unfair competition not only from abroad, but unfair competition among our own people, it is necessary that we should put an immediate stop to the dumping of foreign manufactured goods in this country.

The broad purposes of the National Recovery Act cannot be realized, nor can the intensive NRA campaign now going on throughout the country be brought to a successful conclusion, unless this dumping of foreign goods in America is stopped.

WE MUST HAVE MORE DRASTIC GOVERNMENT ACTION.

Foreign countries are prohibiting dumping in their areas. Their tariffs are being raised to the prohibitive point.

Quotas are being established and, by day to day modification and control, made to serve as effective barriers to the introduction of foreign-made goods.

One need only point to the recent actions of Italy, France and Germany, to see with what alert watchfulness and hair-trigger activity their respective tariffs against foreign goods are manipulated, to the complete exclusion of alien wares and the protection of domestic products.

America has begun in a very timid way to take cognizance of this situation.

The Treasury Department has just issued orders against the dumping of some products from Japan, Germany and the Netherlands.

The orders, signed by Acting Secretary of the Treasury Acheson, are directed against the dumping of incandescent light bulbs, lamps and rubber-soled fabric-topped footwear from Japan, celluloid thumbtacks from Germany and tear-gas from the Netherlands.

These products have been offered in the American market at less than the cost of the raw materials which enter into their manufacture in this country.

A heavy duty will be assessed in the future against such goods, intended to effectually prevent their being dumped within our borders to the prejudice and detriment of our domestic industries.

The Treasury Department has also under consideration similar measures against British cement, rubber-soled footwear from Czechoslovakia, scrap iron and steel products from European countries in general, matches from Japan, fish products from Norway, Portugal, Japan and the United Kingdom, and fiber rugs from Czechoslovakia.

The belated action of the Treasury is only a beginning and, compared to the scale upon which dumping is now practiced and has been permitted by this country, not even a very good beginning.

The government at Washington should take more vigorous steps to protect the American market, to defend the American manufacturer and to make the national recovery campaign a success.

Raising prices at home will amount to nothing if pauper-made products of foreign lands are allowed to control the American market.

Wage raising here will not be permanent if our industries have to compete with the cheap labor of foreign lands, because in that case our labor will have to meet that pauper competition.

To protect the American working man, the American farmer, the American manufacturer,—to protect every American citizen—it is absolutely necessary that we exclude foreign products manufactured on an unfair basis.

Pennington's Plan

The Prohibition Administrator Offers an Answer to the Question, "After Repeal, What?"

In anticipation of the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, Gov. Pinchot is understood to be planning to call the Legislature into special session in November to pass laws for the regulation of the liquor traffic.

It is gratifying to find persons whose opinions are worth noting offering some suggestions. Here, for example, is Commander John D. Pennington, the prohibition administrator, proposing that it be left to each municipality to determine whether it wants to be wet or dry, and, if wet, whether liquor should be sold through a state dispensary system, or in privately owned stores, or in saloons for consumption on the premises.

He advocates further that liquor taxes and license fees be kept well below the figure where they would encourage bootlegging.

It is to be hoped that others in position to speak authoritatively will also offer suggestions, that opinion may crystallize before the Legislature meets, and a long and expensive wrangle be avoided.

Making the Chips Fly

By Nelson Harding

Here is one long idle worker
Who has now returned to labor
With the former pluck and spirit
For which he was rightly famous.

Once again the ax is swinging
And the chips are swiftly flying
As he clears away the wreckage
That so long has blocked the highway.

These Modern Lovers

The modern woman is wonderful! She has succeeded in doing everything—except in making a constant lover and a durable, non-skidding husband out of the modern man.

* * *

It is probably called "heart-balm," because it's the money a woman needs in order to buy facials, permanents and the flossy clothes with which to catch a new "heart."

A woman's pity for a man is usually akin to love; but when a man begins to feel sorry for a woman, it's a first cousin to boredom.

There are married friends, married enemies and married strangers; but only here and there will you meet a pair of married lovers. When the glamour of the honeymoon has worn off, there remains either an abiding tenderness and comradeship or an everlasting misunderstanding. Eros merely checks out.

* * *

After the fourth cocktail, a man reaches that stage of sublime self-assurance, where he feels perfectly confident that "the little woman" won't suspect that he's had a drink.

The world is growing more sophisticated every day—yet, there are still people who write chain letters, men who get excited over jigsaw puzzles and girls who regard rumble-seat lovemaking as flattering.

A woman with personality never follows the styles; she SETS the styles—for other women to follow.

Isn't It So?

Most people judge men only by success or by fortune.

Most people plunge into the sea of matrimony without a life preserver.

YORK HARBOR DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

YORK HARBOR, Me., Sept. 26.—We entered Maine, first time for me, through its oldest town, Kittery, settled in 1647, by crossing a spindly bridge at Portsmouth, N. H. Along streams were many fishermen and at once the distinct aroma of pines. And a woodsy feeling.

There's an agreeable, established look about Kittery. Venerable nestors hobbled the sidewalks on canes, greeting one another with frozen twinkles and exchanging sudden stingy blurts. There's a formidable impression this is a Cal Coolidge community of close chewers and tight spitters.

For Maine strikes a stranger as stern. I thought of that "Way Down East" blizzardy line of parental greeting to the fallen daughter: "Out of my house! I'll have no dinner of your gittin'!" The only emotional outlet in the crust were gypsy palmists bivouacing along the highways—dozens of them.

I was especially interested in the William Dean Howells summer residence and study near by, now occupied during season by John Mead Howells, his architect son. In this house Mark Twain, James Whitcomb Riley, Hamlin Garland, Opie Read and scores of noted authors used to gather for a week end in tayle.

York Harbor shimmers the same aqua-marine hue of the Mediterranean—the clearest stretch of water I have seen in America. Almost the entire native and transient population lives in bathing suits from May until October. Many children were burnt licorice black.

A short drive up the fabled rock-ribbed coast is Kennebunkport, where Booth Tarkington and Kenneth Roberts, the writers, live. We saw the home where Tarkington turned out so many novels. A dog raced across the estate. I wondered if it might be the one that turns so ferocious upon hearing the plink of a banjo.

Ogunquit is one of many artists colonies with a little theater where such valiant troupers as Blanche Ring, Mabel Taliaferro, Hilda Spong, Anne Seymour, Ruth St. Denis and Mary Nash appeared this late summer in quixotic revivals of "Philip Goes Forth" and "The Late Christopher Bean." The power of suggestion plays queer pranks. We saw the names on a billboard and I hopped out to rush across the street to speak to Blanche Ring. And skipped right back as red as anything.

The surging ocean, beating for centuries against Maine's coast line, has hammered a fiercely ragged fringe. Ridges of sharp teeth jutting far to sea do not give it the softness of most sea shores. I wondered if Maine's austerity was not reflected from its forbidding coastal lines, just as cordial warmth seems to spring from Kentucky's soft verdure. From the vast forest silences of Maine come, too, the closest-mouthed types the world produces. That is the Maine guide. I know a man whose guide spoke but four sentences an entire season.

Maine is remindful of the fast hold the camping movement has on youth of America. The first of such camps was established in Maine in 1896. From here they spread to almost every state. But Maine has maintained her lead, and has the greatest number by far.

* * *

I talked to a young policeman along the beach at York Harbor, a hardy rookie with a down-yonder twang. He said it has been the poorest season in memory of the oldest inhabitant—and inhabitants come venerable hereabouts. "Some of the regulars," he twinkled, "have scarcely one yacht to rub against another."

* * *

We dined at Old Orchard, from the beach of which so many airships have taken off for the fate of brave Phil Payne, the newspaperman, whose last mortal view of America was from here. The dinner was quite naturally fresh trout, so highly bespoke. I'm not much of a trout man, but I stoked up on the finest cole slaw ever tasted, and a cinnamon sprinkled apple dumpling that was a lulu.

* * *

I am not savvy, but along the roadside are canary-yellow signs in black letters "Kiss Your Wife." I saw them everywhere. I suppose it's just Maine being terribly, terribly old-fashioned.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Nothing unusual about that. You might not even notice it. Just a picture of a 17-year-old youngster in a white sweater. Thin young shoulders, tumbled hair—freckled nose and shy, merry eyes and a wide, gentle mouth, just firming into manhood. Only a boy—still such a little boy—surprising his mother with a picture of his new sweater. I wonder if his neck was clean? I'm certain it wasn't!

Dear little boy—smiling across the years, dreams in your eyes. I wonder if, somewhere, they all came true.

Just a picture. Probably you'd never notice it. Or think it very important if you did. Maybe it isn't very important. And yet—

The world is full of things, for you and for me. The years go on, filling it fuller. I'm glad for life. It's a great experience. I made up my mind I'd go on and take all there was to take. I've traveled—been places and done things. I've gambled—dared to live, dared to laugh, dared to love. And—yes, I've gotten a lot out of it.

Beauty—I've seen more than my share of that. Wonder and delight—and the mysterious spirit of things. I've seen that, too. I'd have seen more if I had been worthier. Success—they say I've had that. Well—perhaps. Maybe the having was worth while, maybe it wasn't. But at least I had my chance to find out. Power—one gets that too. And wisdom—it's always there to lean on. Pretty much all that life can give I've had. All the tools that a human can use to find his way around. Yet, it's strange. None of them meant to me what that little picture means. None of them helped me, like that.

Just the memory of a boy's young eyes and sensitive mouth—and dear, half baby stick-out ears. And the beautiful innocence of him and the heart-breaking courage—so sure he'd be able to face anything life had to offer! So confident he'd find love and fair play.

Strange, how one memory like that will stand by through the thick of everything.

You know, don't you? There's a memory like that for you too.

No matter how much else there has been—no matter what else has happened to you—there was just one thing in life that made everything else worth while. One hand you clutched through all the years—one thought that steadied you when you were desperate—cleaned and comforted you when you were bad or sad—made you want to do your best—spurred you on!

Out of all the many things in the world, just one thing that means anything else, to each of us—

Love is like that.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

To Grow

To grow, that is the aim of life;
Serenely as a flower.
Untouched by any hurt or strife,
With beauty for a dower!

Or, if it need be thus, to grow
Through conflict, struggle, stress,
Through poignant passion, and to know
Few hours of happiness,

To make each joy, each sorrow bring
The goal one step more near;
To let no grief too deeply sting,
To hold no bliss too dear!

To grow, to conquer, to endure
With courage half sublime,
To gain the soul-strength which can cure
All pains and pangs of time!

The Human Side of the News

The Afridis Start a New War Against British India—A Juvenile Leader—The Rubber Boom in Sumatra

By EDWIN C. HILL

FIGHTING planes of the British Air Force sing their savage song these days high over the Himalayan passes of the Northern India frontier, dropping high explosives upon the turbaned heads of the Afridis, the fierce tribesmen that have started a new war against British authority. It is one of those little wars which Britain is everlastingly waging somewhere in the East, but this one has its unique and romantic side.

The tribesmen assailing Khyber Pass—the great gateway into Northern India, one of the strategic posts which the shrewdness of the British Lion seized upon long ago—are led not by a six-footer with a black beard and a tulwar three feet long, but by a boy of 12. The boy's name is Ghulam Nabi and he is the son of a border chief of the Afridis. Nothing is impossible in India, especially in the Khyber, and this 12-year-old is giving the British Raj more trouble than they have had for many a day.

Became a Leader At Age of Eleven

INTERESTING to recall that one of the world's greatest conquerors, Babur, founder of the Mogul Empire, was a soldier-leader at the age of 11, had conquered half Asia by 16, and broke through the Khyber to seize all India before he was 32. Young Ghulam Nabi may cut something of a splash before his time comes. After all, Babur the Mogul did not have to face the white man's machine guns or thousand-pound high explosives plumped down from above.

The present "little war" is one of an incredibly long series of conflicts that have raged through Khyber Pass. For probably 50 centuries races from the north have striven to smash through the only cleft that shows in the Himalayas. History has seen a long parade of conquerors through the Khyber; seen, too, the retreat of some of them.

Alexander the Great led his Greeks and Macedonians through the great pass, and after him came the Mongols, the Turks and the Moguls. And now the British are defending it once more, clinging to it as the key to India and to her trade in the Far East.

The ancient hill town of Peshawas is a little Garden of Eden in a rocky desert, lying in the heart of the pass. Soldiers in scarlet stroll under the trees of the slumberous streets, and black-bearded Sikhs and Rajputs, non-commissioned officers, swagger in front of the cantonments. There are flower-decked bungalows with green lawns. It is a little bit of England transported to old Asia.

But the bazar is all Asia—the teaming, colorful, mysterious Asia of Kipling. Fighting men slip down from the Khyber and squat in the bazar to plot murder and loot. Mohammedan women in Purdah—face veils—peer down from latticed screens. But under the quiet and pretense of English life is always the dread of sudden alarm and the implacable foe, waiting, always waiting, behind the mountains of the north.

Holland's Great Eastern Empire

A BOOK and a motion picture call attention anew to the great empire, far out in the hot, eastern seas, which is ruled by one of the smallest of Western nations, little Holland. The picture catches a savage old giant in a threatening mood. The old giant is the volcano of Krakatoa, which rises out of the burning sea in Sunda Strait, between Java and Borneo.

It was away back in 1883 that Krakatoa literally shook the solid earth when it blew its head off. So terrific were the explosions that they were heard as far away as Ceylon and the Philippine Islands. A thousand miles from Malaysia the air was thick and misty with the dust of that frightful explosion. No man knows how many little brown men and little brown women perished in that agony of a mountain. And now old Krakatoa, with anger still in his primitive heart, growls again, and threatens, and sends plumes of menacing smoke floating out over the Dutch plantations.

The book, which finds its color and its action in the great Dutch empire of fifty million souls, an empire which has demonstrated a colonial genius on the part of the Dutch people, is a fascinating volume called "White Money," and has just been published. It tells the vivid tale of the life of the rubber planters during the phenomenal boom in the price of rubber some years ago, when the British and the Dutch had cornered the market and sent prices sky high. And it goes to show the simple fact that most simple people know, and of which politicians and statesmen are often so curiously ignorant, that human nature is about the same around the curve of the earth, in any land, in any clime and, yes, in any time.

For when the boom in rubber reached Sumatra there followed among the white planters the same breakdown in common sense and in character that the rest of the world knew during the big stock market splurge of a few years ago. As rubber prices soared, and money flowed like water, character disintegrated among all except the very strong and level-headed. They had overcome hardships and adversity, these exiles from Europe. They had fought and tamed the wild tribes of the jungle. They had made the desert bloom and subdued unfriendly nature. But prosperity was too much for many of them.

They believed, as most of us believed back in 1929, as many of our economists and statesmen believed, that poverty was a thing of the past, that high prices would continue forever, and that the old virtues of thrift and hard work and simple living could be discarded for all time. They gave themselves up to love and liquor, a dangerous combination at any time, under the most temperate of suns, but fatal in the tropics. And as the fiber of their character decayed the crash fell upon them, with the loss of their savings and their melancholy retreat from the blazing, treacherous, fascinating East to begin a new life in Europe.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Setbacks you have received may be of great and lasting benefit to you.

It is possible that you have an exalted and exaggerated opinion of yourself and your ability.

For several years it was easy to make money, and you set it down to your personal business acumen that your fortunes were improving.

You not only expanded your business, but your head began to swell.

You became important and probably arrogant, in keep with your success, as you looked at it.

You made no attempt to disguise your opinion of the man who was not getting on as fast as you were.

But now it is different.

You cannot account for the change in your affairs, considering your past success and your plans for the future.

But of late you have found out that you are far from a wizard in matters of finance.
